So Much to Attack In Bennett Budget

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Nobody will be more pleased with Premier Bennett's 1972 budget than the opposition — it gives them so much to criticize.

They wouldn't say it directly Friday after hearing the budget speech, but NDP Leader Dave Barrett and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer were obviously relieved.

They had expected financial showmanship, but instead they got a grab-bag of special funds. It was, despite a 20-per-cent increase in spending, a conservative budget. Barrett was being merely descriptive when he observed the budget contained no new directions.

Bennett proposed to outspend his 1971 performance by $266 million with a $1.45 billion budget.

Its highlights are two job-creating programs in parks and forestry costing $20 million. But the parks program is a continuation of a project Bennett started last year.

The $25 million green belt protection fund is only interesting if Bennett decides to spend it. It is significant that the budget speech fails to outline a land-purchasing program for this fund.

The $10 million power line beautification program already has aroused the suspicions of some municipal leaders who smell in it a hidden subsidy to B.C. Hydro.

Senior citizens will like the $50 increase in the homeowner grant — that is, those who own homes will like it.

The rapid transit program is no program at all, simply a formal repetition of an offer Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan made last year for municipalities to buy Hydro's bus system.

With Bennett's huge surpluses and strong revenue base he could have done some amazing things.

He could have eliminated medicare premiums, brought in a denticare program, eliminated the education share of property taxes for the elderly or created government-operated automobile insurance.

If he wanted, Bennett could have completely revised municipal-provincial financial relations. He could have started subsidies for the working poor as the first step toward the guaranteed annual income he says he wants so badly.

He certainly could have cut taxes this year. But he didn't. He did none of these things, and opposition members will surely thank him for this as they write their budget debate speeches during the next two weeks.

At least the budget will enliven a dismally dull legislature which had been forced to debate a peek-a-boo throne speech for two weeks.

Progressive Conservative house leader Scott Wallace was steaming with Scottish rage after he heard the budget speech. You can bet he won't give a dissertation on Tory philosophy when he speaks next Tuesday.

Fe people are saying the budget hints an election, knowing that Bennett's treasury is still rich enough to fund some real treats.

Yet after the premier's curiously uninspired performance Friday, the opposition probably would like nothing better than for him to call a press conference one morning later this year and deliver the Big News.

Why No Tax Cuts?

Premier Bennett should have cut taxes in the budget he brought down Friday, Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said today.

"Bennett uses the fiscal process more as a means to influence elections than as a lever to promote equity and balance in the economy," Ryan said. "At this time, tax cuts are needed. This is the missing element in the budget."

He said "it is fair enough" for Bennett to dip into his surplus funds when poor economic conditions exist "but this may not be enough to get the economy out of the rut.

"The government has no right to overtax citizens in good times, and then to default on the policy during periods of high unemployment. The fiscal process needs to function in a cyclical way if we are to have a balanced economy."

Ryan also took issue with Bennett over the premier's references to a policy of a guaranteed annual wage for Canadians.

"He urges a guaranteed annual wage policy by Ottawa but then turns thumbs down to guaranteed wage principles in B.C.," Ryan said.

Man Smashed Window At Hospital

Albert B. Coburn, 24, 2555 Millstream Road, who admitted breaking a window and damaging a fire exit door in St. Joseph's Hospital Friday night, was fined $35 in provincial court today.

He was also ordered to pay $10 to repair the window.

Police said Coburn ran through the hospital corridors and when persued broke a window and kicked the door. He had been drinking.

the weather

Early morning temperatures dipped a couple of degrees lower than expected over southwestern B.C. today and as a result precipitation which began as rain changed to wet snow which will turn back to rain as temperatures climb through mid morning.

Temperatures are moderating very slowly over B.C. but they are moderating. Seven new low minimum records and five low maximum records for the date were established across the province Friday but none are likely today.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"It's my new system...I call it 'You Remember Your Birthday and I'll Remember Mine'."

Trade Irritants May Subside

By BOGDAN KIPLING
Financial Times

OTTAWA — The prolonged hassle between Canada and the United States over trade "irritants" may have been resolved.

Officials in both countries agreed to a package deal which calls for concessions on both sides, but mainly by Canada.

The cabinet approved the agreement last Thursday and the final version was communicated to Washington the same evening.

It is now up to President Nixon and his Treasury Secretary John Connally to accept the concessions or face another round of prolonged talks that could stall the official devaluation of the American dollar and lead to far-reaching international monetary complications.

Although the concessions are mutual, the most controversial points of Canadian-American friction on trade have been swept under the carpet. They would be referred to a bilateral committee which would report at the end of the year, well after the presidential election in the U.S. and the expected general election here.

Provisions of the auto pact will be eased up, but individual Canadians will not be able to import cars duty-free from the U.S.

Allowances for Canadians returning from the U.S. will be substantially increased, but not to the $100 a month level enjoyed by Americans returning from Canada.

Canadians are now allowed $25 worth every three months.

● "Ignore" the value added and sales to production ratio safeguards of the 1965 auto trade agreement. Both safeguards were inserted to protect jobs in Canada and ensure expansion of the auto industry.

● Participate in a bilateral the basis of the auto pact, including the prohibition applying to individual Canadains to import cars duty free. Only manufacturers can get cars across the border without paying the levy.

● Help American manufacturers to skip the 10 per cent protectionist tariff surrounding Canadian defence production contracts. Canadians now have free access to the American market but this does not apply in reverse. The tariff would not apply to contracts worth more than $125,000.

● Allow duty-free imports of all-terrain sports vehicles, such as hunters' buggies. This would not apply to snowmobiles. Canadians can already ship such vehicles duty free south of the border.

Subject to Nixon's approval, Washington has agreed to:

● Review tariffs which now apply to some Canadian agricultural implements.

● Set up a commission to examine the application of anti-dumping rules and customs procedures affecting Canadian products.

● Resume the practice of "breaking out" certain auto parts from tariff regulations. This can be done only by the president.

● Pledge not to sell uranium from its strategic stockpile in such a way as to disrupt third markets.

Canada has tried to get access to the uranium market now reserved for American producers, but obviously Washington is not yielding.

perhaps $3 million or $4 million whereas the premier was prepared to put aside $10 million for power line beautification.

McGeer doubted that many of the special funds will be spent. He said they were created to ease Bennett's embarrassment, as having accumulated huge surpluses. He also predicted taxes would go up for elderly renters.

"It's a typical Bennett budget. A little more tired than usual, a little further behind the dynamic activity of the province and not nearly the kind of creative fiscal instrument that the people deserve."

LIBERAL BUDGET

McGeer promised to bring down a Liberal budget on Monday, $100 million larger than Bennett's because it will be based on revenues from the upcoming fiscal year, not on the previous fiscal year. He said he thought this was an election budget.

He also said B.C. Hydro and the PGE should have to borrow on the open market in the future so all tax revenues and transfer payments could be spent on services to people.

Wallace was highly critical of the budget's failure to show leadership in intermediate care.

"As I sat there listening to the budget speech, I was still thinking about the people in nursing homes who are trying to pay their monthly accommodation of $400, $500 and $600. He recites a whole list of recommendations which in no specific way helps the poor people at all.

"Here is a man, the leader of a province who says he has $266 million that he can use to inject into the next year's financing and there's not one penny to be devoted to help the people who are in nursing homes and private hospitals."

Wallace noted the budget "paid lip service" to a guaranteed annual income then didn't even announce a raise in welfare rates.

"There's obviously one sector of the people that he doesn't really care too much about and these are the elderly sick. I just, at this stage, so early after hearing his speech — I still can't believe my ears. I just can't believe it."

The last election was in 1969. Elections have been held at three year intervals since 1960.

Asked what he considered the highlight of the budget, Bennett replied: "The total package."

Socred MLAs built up to a crescendo of desk-thumping appreciation as Bennett announced a succession of special fund allotments including:

● A new $25 million Green Belt Profection Fund to be used to save land in perpetuity from urban encroachment;

● A new $10 million Accelerated Reforestation Fund to provide "make-work" projects;

● Another new $10 million fund to assist municipalities and utilities in putting hydro and telephone wires underground;

● An additional $25 million for the continuing home acquisition grant fund;

● An additional $10 million to replenish the $15 million Accelerated Parks Development Fund set up last year;

● And $5 million each to raise the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund and the British Columbia Cultural Fund to $15 million each.

Bennett also made a formal offer to municipalities to share in half the deficits of municipal transit systems, an invitation to Victoria and Vancouver regional districts to take over Hydro operated systems.

GIFT TAX

He raised exemptions on succession duties for inheritances from close relatives from the current $60,000 to $150,000. As announced earlier, a gift tax was introduced to prevent evasion of succession duties.

Family farms and businesses will get 10 years of interest-free time to pay succession duties in equal instalments.

Is Your Breath What It Used To Be?

Bad breath has a number of causes. Age is a factor—so are dentures, caps, bridgework, gum trouble and so on. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control "aging breath" problems. You see, Steri/sol is the only mouthwash with Hexetidine—the powerful germ killer that deprives mouth bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live.

When you are worried about "aging breath", rinse with Steri/sol. Steri/sol is specially designed to combat these particular breath problems: The germ killing action of Hexetidine starts immediately, and within 15 minutes up to 95% of bad breath bacteria are eliminated. And because the Hexetidine in Steri/sol clings to mouth and gum tissues, the bactericidal action keeps on working up to 10 hours to help you feel really sure about your breath.

Put Steri/sol to work on bad breath right away. It does cost more than you might usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Airport Bomb Defused In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)— Explosive experts defused a live bomb found in a parcel locker at Vancouver International Airport Friday night after CP Air received a call demanding $200,000.

The threat forced two Vancouver-Montreal CP Air flights to be delayed for searches in Toronto and a third flight from Vancouver to Tokyo was diverted to Anchorage.

The drama began when a man phoned CP Air and demanded $200,000. He said bombs had been planted in certain places and threatened to detonate them if the money was not paid.

The bomb, defused by RCMP explosives experts, was reported to have weighed 30 pounds.

IN AIR

CP Air had two flights en route to Montreal and a flight to Tokyo in the air when the threat was made.

A spokesman for the airline declined to give details, but said: "From the information we received from the caller, we decided to stop and search the flights."

About 200 passengers on the Canadian flights were delayed for almost three hours while the planes and baggage were searched.

The other flight was 400 miles north of Amchitka Island in the Bering Sea on the trans-polar route to Japan when the bomb call was received.

UNDER ESCORT

It remained overnight after it was searched in order to comply with rest times required for jet crews. It was to leave at 12 noon PST today.

PARTIES READY FOR ELECTION

The opposition likes one feature of the provincial budget — there's so much to criticize, says Times legislature writer Peter McNelly in an article on Page 2. He says neither the New Democrats nor the Liberals would fear an election on the budget proposals.

Poor Get Little —Opposition

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Provincial opposition leaders said Friday Premier Bennett's $1.45 billion budget does little for the poor, the elderly and tenants.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said it was a conservative budget which will prove a "major disappointment to the average working person or retired person in British Columbia."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer termed it a "cynical budget" leading to increased taxes for elderly people in low income groups.

NURSING HOMES

Progressive Conservative House Leader Scott Wallace said he could not believe Premier Bennett would increase spending by more than $266 million and devote "not one penny" for care of the elderly sick in nursing homes and private hospitals.

Barrett also predicted municipal tax increases because of the budget's failure to increase the per-capita grant to municipalities. He said the increases in the homeowner grant will "at best" keep pace with inflationary tax increases in previous years.

He said he intends to study this weekend whether the increase borrowing authority for B.C. Hydro by $500 million was done to account for an "over-cost" in Columbia River Treaty funds.

"It's certainly not a little people's budget. In effect you can say it's a gimmickry budget with more of the same. No real direction at all."

He refused to say whether he thought this was a pre-election budget. Barrett also criticized the budget's failure to speak of increased revenues from the resource industries, particularly mining.

BACK TO WORK

Because the budget did not allow for an increase in welfare rates, he said, chronic welfare recipients will have less hope than before of being able to get back to work. He also hit the lack of money to subsidize the working poor.

McGeer said the budget's only redeeming feature was the $50 homeowner grant increase to the elderly. But this must be put into perspective, he said.

"It will cost the treasury

IRA Slips Blockade, Sunday Attack Feared

NEWRY, Northern Ireland (CP) — Security forces say guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army are slipping into the blockaded town of Newry to attack British troops sent there to disperse a planned civil rights march by Roman Catholics Sunday.

Roads to Newry, near the border with the Irish Republic, have been blocked by soldiers who are searching vehicles for hidden arms. British intelligence officers say they were tipped by a woman that the IRA gave her sons British army uniforms to wear at the parade.

DEMONSTRATION

The planned parade Sunday by thousands of civil rights marchers has been declared illegal under Northern Ireland's ban on public processions. IRA leaders claim they have advised their members to avoid Newry over the week to prevent another "bloody Sunday."

Foreign Minister Patrick Hillery is flying to Ottawa from Washington this weekend for talks with Canadian leaders Monday. He received no pledge of assistance from the U.S.

Newry was poised to receive hundreds of journalists from around the world who were pouring in to report on the march which is expected to be joined by about 30,000 people from Ulster and the republic.

The one hint of a possible compromise was suggestions that the march organizers might decide to hold a public meeting—still legal in Ulster — instead of a demonstration.

British Prime Minister Edward Heath, Home Secretary Reginald Maudling and Ulster Premier Brian Faulkner have urged that the march be called off. Heath and Faulkner met for six hours in London Friday but no new policies were announced.

CARDINAL SPEAKS

Cardinal Conway, Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, added his voice to those calling for cancellation of the demonstration.

The town was ringed Friday night with British troops and members of the volunteer Ulster Defence Regiment who searched all vehicles entering the area for explosives or weapons.

The red lights of army vehicles flashed in the heavy mist as soldiers with blackened faces, many carrying automatic weapons carried out their minute searches.

Inside the town of 18,000, predominantly Catholic, most stores have been boarded up as a precaution against further violence or as a result of attacks launched against them in recent months.

BIG PARADE

The Sunday demonstration is everyone's preoccupation. A working class club, usually packed with late-night drinkers was nearly empty by midnight Friday. Most had gone home early to brace themselves for the expected crisis ahead.

An additional 500 British troops have been sent to Ulster, bringing the total to 15,000. Heath says he is determined to carry out what he considers to be his responsibility to uphold the ban on marches.

One soldier was flown to hospital in Belfast late Friday with serious wounds suffered when a bomb exploded near the border. An elderly man was seriously wounded in another blast in the capital.

EAST TORY COOL TO QUEEN OATH

HALIFAX (CP) — Patrick Nowlan, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Annapolis Valley, caused a stir at the provincial party's annual meeting Friday when he said he "wouldn't fight too hard" if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to one emphasizing Canada.

The monarchy was looked upon as a "divisive influence in Quebec," Mr. Nowlan said, adding that he "wouldn't fight too hard if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to an oath of allegiance to Canada."

His comments came after leader Robert Stanfield confirmed his support for the monarchy in response to a questioner who suggested the opposition leader's stand on the matter was as "wishy-washy" as Prime Minister Trudeau's.

'Housecleaning' Faces 20 Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says a "housecleaning" of Liberal members of Parliament from Quebec is planned by the party in advance of the next general election, involving the retirement, sometimes forced, of about one third of the party's Quebec MPs.

The newspaper says in an Ottawa story that about 20 members are believed to be involved, some of whom will retire by choice and "some will be forced out." Some will be coaxed into comfortable jobs "arranged by the government," the report says.

There are 56 Liberals among the 74 Quebec MPs and, the report says, a "new team" is wanted by top party officials.

The Star says Liberal sources in Ottawa are reluctant to confirm details but the campaign has been in progress quietly for about two years.

The target is the "large group of old guard Quebec MPs, who occupy eternally safe Liberal seats but add little or nothing to the Quebec presence in Ottawa."

The report says the work of rejuvenation is mainly in the hands of Marc Lalonde, principal private secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, assisted by Jean Richard, Liberal party director in Quebec.

Neither Mr. Lalonde, Mr. Richard nor other Liberal spokesmen were available for comment.

NEW LEADER of Newfoundland Liberals is Edward M. Roberts, 31, former health minister under Joseph Smallwood, who was elected chief today on the first ballot. He had 363 of the 663 votes cast.

'Up Periscope' Near For Motorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. motorists will be peering through a periscope instead of into a rearview mirror four years from now under new government safety standards.

The new equipment gets rid of the blind spots that are a hazard with the interior and outside rearview mirrors now employed, says Charles Kaehn, director of driver visibility standards for the national highway traffic safety administration.

"This new system gives twice the horizontal field of view that you get with conventional mirrors," Kaehn said on a recent test drive in a periscope-equipped sedan.

Present rearview mirrors give a 30-degree sweep of vision. The test version of the periscope offers 60 degrees and the regular system that will be adopted for all new cars, effective probably in September 1976, will cover about 80 degrees.

Some drivers who have tried out the experimental version say the field of coverage is almost too great. So much rear action meets the eye that they find it confusing.

Most agreed that there will be no real difficulty adjusting to the new equipment.

Donnely Mirrors, Inc., Holland, Mich., produced 50 of the periscopes under a $14,000 contract and installed them on cars being test-driven by government employees.

The test mirrors ride atop the cars so that from the outside they resemble the sign cabinet of a taxicab.

The cost to the consumer, Kaehn said, will be about $25. It would be more except that manufacturers save by eliminating the inner and outer mirrors now required.

Homeowners Bag Lion's Share

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

An exhuberant Premier W. A. C. Bennett unloaded $116 million in accumulated surpluses on top of a record $1.45 billion budget Friday and indicated there's plenty more where that came from.

Bennett offered increases in homeowner grants and dumped $90 million into special funds, some of them for job-creation programs.

The $1.45 billion balanced budget for the year beginning April 1 would represent a 12 per cent increase over estimated spending in the current fiscal year.

But the additional $116 million in surplus spending puts the total proposed expenditures at $1.568 billion — $266 million or 20 per cent more than estimated for the current year.

BIG CUSHION

Even with the additional spending of accumulated surpluses, Bennett's interim financial statements for the first nine months of the current year show him with a $50 million cushion that could hit $150 million by the end of the 1972-73 fiscal year.

Bennett, hoarse but lively, repeatedly interjected plugs for the Social Credit government into his 90-minute budget speech and wound up by calling it "the government that really cares."

The 71-year-old premier was applauded wildly by Socreds as he announced a $15 increase — to $185 — in the annual homeowner grant and an additional $50 for those over 65, making a total of $235.

Bennett declined to call it an "election budget," suggesting that all budgets are election budgets.

Dam for Floods 'Stupid'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

An internationally-known environmentalist said today building the proposed Moran dam on the Fraser for flood control is a concept "stupid beyond measure."

Roderick Haig-Brown of Campbell River said a dyking system to protect the lower Fraser Valley will be needed with or without the dam and will do the job by itself.

He was asked to comment on remarks in the legislature this week by Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan who said in his view, if the Moran dam does go ahead, it should only be built for flood control reasons.

The proposed 700-foot dam would flood about 170 miles of river valley north from near Merritt to near Quesnel. An idea which has lain dormant for several years, it is now under study by the B.C. Energy Board which is charting provincial power needs until 1985.

Kiernan said with or without the Moran dam, major flooding of interior river valleys will be needed for flood control on the lower Fraser.

"I don't think he could be much further out," Haig-Brown said today. "Of all the clumsy ways to get flood control, a very costly mainstream dam on a big river is the least efficient."

Ideal flood control if dams are involved at all would be through headwater dams on sidestreams together with proper protection of headwater timber.

"This sort of thing we're not doing on the Fraser to any great extent and of course far too much building on the floodplains has been permitted and encouraged. The land has too great an agricultural value," he said.

Kiernan said cost estimates of dyking along the Fraser have blossomed from $4 million in 1963 to the neighborhood of $80 million.

Haig-Brown said he understood an estimate in 1969 put the cost at about $18 million and the reference to $80 million must be to some other scheme he knows nothing about.

Estimates on the cost of the Moran dam have ranged to half a billion dollars. There is still a question of whether the proposed site is practical from a construction standpoint.

Ecologists, including Haig-Brown, have condemned the idea of the Moran dam because of environmental damage they say would follow, including destruction of huge salmon runs.

CANADA CONCESSIONS ON TRADE REPORTED

Trade "irritants" which have led to strained relations between Canada and the United States for some time may have been resolved, the Financial Times says in a dispatch from Ottawa.

Writer Bogdan Kipling reports that officials in both countries have agreed to a package deal which calls for concessions on both sides, but mainly from Canada. Story on Page 2.

Most of the 125,000 people fled their homes early Friday when a series of some 20 tremors began, causing the death of one woman from a heart attack and damage to hundreds of buildings.

So Much to Attack In Bennett Budget

By PETER McNeily
Times Staff

Nobody will be more pleased with Premier Bennett's 1972 budget than the opposition — it gives them so much to criticize.

They wouldn't say it directly Friday after hearing the budget speech, but NDP Leader Dave Barrett and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer were obviously relieved.

They had expected financial showmanship, but instead they got a grab-bag of special funds. It was, despite a 20-per-cent increase in spending, a conservative budget. Barrett was being merely descriptive when he observed the budget contained no new directions.

Bennett proposed to outspend his 1971 performance by $266 million with a $1.45 billion budget.

Its highlights are two job-creating programs in parks and forestry costing $20 million. But the parks program is a continuation of a project Bennett started last year.

The $25 million green belt protection fund is only interesting if Bennett decides to spend it. It is significant that the budget speech fails to outline a land-purchasing program for this fund.

The $10 million power line beautification program already has aroused the suspicions of some municipal leaders who smell in it a hidden subsidy to B.C. Hydro.

Senior citizens will like the $50 increase in the homeowner grant — that is, those who own homes will like it.

The rapid transit program is no program at all, simply a formal repetition of an offer Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan made last year for municipalities to buy Hydro's bus system.

With Bennett's huge surpluses and strong revenue base he could have done some amazing things.

He could have eliminated medicare premiums, brought in a denticare program, eliminated the education share of property taxes for the elderly or created government-operated automobile insurance.

If he wanted, Bennett could have completely revised municipal-provincial financial relations. He could have started subsidies for the working poor as the first step toward the guaranteed annual income he says he wants so badly.

He certainly could have cut taxes this year. But he didn't. He did none of these things, and opposition members will surely thank him for this as they write their budget debate speeches during the next two weeks.

At least the budget will enliven a dismally dull legislature which had been forced to debate a peek-a-boo throne speech for two weeks.

Progressive Conservative house leader Scott Wallace was steaming with Scottish rage after he heard the budget speech. You can bet he won't give a dissertation on Tory philosophy when he speaks next Tuesday.

Fe people are saying the budget hints an election, knowing that Bennett's treasury is still rich enough to fund some real treats.

Yet after the premier's curiously uninspired performance Friday, the opposition probably would like nothing better than for him to call a press conference one morning later this year and deliver the Big News.

Why No Tax Cuts?

Premier Bennett should have cut taxes in the budget he brought down Friday, Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said today.

"Bennett uses the fiscal process more as a means to influence elections than as a lever to promote equity and balance in the economy," Ryan said. "At this time, tax cuts are needed. This is the missing element in the budget."

He said "it is fair enough" for Bennett to dip into his surplus funds when poor economic conditions exist "but this may not be enough to get the economy out of the rut.

"The government has no right to overtax citizens in good times, and then to default on the policy during periods of high unemployment. The fiscal process needs to function in a cyclical way if we are to have a balanced economy."

Ryan also took issue with Bennett over the premier's references to a policy of a guaranteed annual wage for Canadians.

"He urges a guaranteed annual wage policy by Ottawa but then turns thumbs down to guaranteed wage principles in B.C.," Ryan said.

Man Smashed Window At Hospital

Albert B. Coburn, 24, 2555 Millstream Road, who admitted breaking a window and damaging a fire exit door in St. Joseph's Hospital Friday night, was fined $35 in provincial court today.

He was also ordered to pay $10 to repair the window.

Police said Coburn ran through the hospital corridors and when persued broke a window and kicked the door. He had been drinking.

Trade Irritants May Subside

By BOGDAN KIPLING
Financial Times

OTTAWA — The prolonged hassle between Canada and the United States over trade "irritants" may have been resolved.

Officials in both countries agreed to a package deal which calls for concessions on both sides, but mainly by Canada.

The cabinet approved the agreement last Thursday and the final version was communicated to Washington the same evening.

It is now up to President Nixon and his Treasury Secretary John Connally to accept the concessions or face another round of prolonged talks that could stall the official devaluation of the American dollar and lead to far-reaching international menetary complications.

Although the concessions are mutual, the most controversial points of Canadian-American friction on trade have been swept under the carpet. They would be referred to a bilateral committee which would report at the end of the year, well after the presidential election in the U.S. and the expected general election here.

Provisions of the auto pact will be eased up, but individual Canadians will not be able to import cars duty-free from the U.S.

Allowances for Canadians returning from the U.S. will be substantially increased, but not to the $100 a month level enjoyed by Americans returning from Canada.

Canadians are now allowed $25 worth every three months.

● "Ignore" the value added and sales to production ratio safeguards of the 1965 auto trade agreement. Both safeguards were inserted to protect jobs in Canada and ensure expansion of the auto industry.

● Participate in a bilateral the basis of the auto pact, including the prohibition applying to individual Canadains to import cars duty free. Only manufacturers can get cars across the border without paying the levy.

● Help American manufacturers to skip the 10 per cent protectionist tariff surrounding Canadian defence production contracts. Canadians now have free access to the American market but this does not apply in reverse. The tariff would not apply to contracts worth more than $125,000.

● Allow duty-free imports of all-terrain sports vehicles, such as hunters' buggies. This would not apply to snowmobiles. Canadians can already ship such vehicles duty free south of the border.

Subject to Nixon's approval, Washington has agreed to:

● Review tariffs which now apply to some Canadian agricultural implements.

● Set up a commission to examine the application of anti-dumping rules and customs procedures affecting Canadian products.

● Resume the practice of "breaking out" certain auto parts from tariff regulations. This can be done only by the president.

● Pledge not to sell uranium from its strategic stockpile in such a way as to disrupt third markets.

Canada has tried to get access to the uranium market now reserved for American producers, but obviously Washington is not yielding.

Early morning temperatures dipped a couple of degrees lower than expected over southwestern B.C. today and as a result precipitation which began as rain changed to wet snow which will turn back to rain as temperatures climb through mid morning.

Temperatures are moderating very slowly over B.C. but they are moderating. Seven new low minimum records and five low maximum records for the date were established across the province Friday but none are likely today.

perhaps $3 million or $4 million whereas the premier was prepared to put aside $10 million for power line beautification.

McGeer doubted that many of the special funds will be spent. He said they were created to ease Bennett's embarrassment as having accumulated huge surpluses. He also predicted taxes would go up for elderly renters.

"It's a typical Bennett budget. A little more tired than usual, a little further behind the dynamic activity of the province and not nearly the kind of creative fiscal instrument that the people deserve."

LIBERAL BUDGET

McGeer promised to bring down a Liberal budget on Monday, $100 million larger than Bennett's because it will be based on revenues from the upcoming fiscal year, not on the previous fiscal year. He said he thought this was an election budget.

He also said B.C. Hydro and the PGE should have to borrow on the open market in the future so all tax revenues and transfer payments could be spent on services to people.

Wallace was highly critical of the budget's failure to show leadership in intermediate care.

"As I sat there listening to the budget speech, I was still thinking about the people in nursing homes who are trying to pay their monthly accommodation of $400, $500 and $600. He recites a whole list of recommendations which in no specific way helps the poor people at all.

"Here is a man, the leader of a province who says he has $266 million that he can use to inject into the next year's financing and there's not one penny to be devoted to help the people who are in nursing homes and private hospitals."

Wallace noted the budget "paid lip service" to a guaranteed annual income then didn't even announce a raise in welfare rates.

"There's obviously one sector of the people that he doesn't really care too much about and these are the elderly sick. I just, at this stage, so early after hearing his speech — I still can't believe my ears. I just can't believe it."

The last election was in 1969. Elections have been held at three year intervals since 1960.

Asked what he considered the highlight of the budget, Bennett replied: "The total package."

Socred MLAs built up to a crescendo of desk-thumping appreciation as Bennett announced a succession of special fund allotments including:

● A new $25 million Green Belt Protection Fund to be used to save land in perpetuity from urban encroachment;

● A new $10 million Accelerated Reforestation Fund to provide "make-work" projects;

● Another new $10 million fund to assist municipalities and utilities in putting hydro and telephone wires underground;

● An additional $25 million for the continuing home acquisition grant fund;

● An additional $10 million to replenish the $15 million Accelerated Parks Development Fund set up last year;

● And $5 million each to raise the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund and the British Columbia Cultural Fund to $15 million each.

Bennett also made a formal offer to municipalities to share in half the deficits of municipal transit systems, an invitation to Victoria and Vancouver regional districts to take over Hydro operated systems.

GIFT TAX

He raised exemptions on succession duties for inheritances from close relatives from the current $60,000 to $150,000. As announced earlier, a gift tax was introduced to prevent evasion of succession duties.

Family farms and businesses will get 10 years of interest-free time to pay succession duties in equal instalments.

Is Your Breath What It Used To Be?

Bad breath has a number of causes. Age is a factor—so are dentures, caps, bridgework, gum trouble and so on. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control "aging breath" problems. You see, Steri/sol is the only mouthwash with Hexetidine—the powerful germ killer that deprives mouth bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live.

When you are worried about "aging breath", rinse with Steri/sol. Steri/sol is specially designed to combat these particular breath problems. The germ killing action of Hexetidine starts immediately, and within 15 minutes up to 95% of bad breath bacteria are eliminated. And because the Hexetidine in Steri/sol clings to mouth and gum tissues, the bactericidal action keeps on working up to 10 hours to help you feel really sure about your breath.

Put Steri/sol to work on bad breath right away. It does cost more than you might usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Policemen 'Fabricated' Evidence

MONTREAL (CP) — An RCMP corporal, formerly on the Montreal police morality squad, said Friday he informed Jacques Saulnier that some squad members were in the habit of "adding" evidence in cases where there was not enough proof to convict a suspect.

Cpl. Denis Couture, testifying at a Quebec Police Commission inquiry into the conduct of Mr. Saulnier, now Montreal police chief and head of the morality squad in 1966, said he was never asked by Mr. Saulnier to fabricate evidence, but "it was done every day by the others."

The inquiry, called in the wake of a report that Mr. Saulnier received a color television set from a Montreal hotel owner in December, 1966, has heard wide-ranging testimony from members and former members of the Montreal police force, on the captain's conduct when he headed the morality squad.

A woman called Martha Adams was subpoenaed to appear before the commission Friday but a heavy snowstorm prevented police from bringing her to the inquiry and Cpl. Couture was the day's only witness.

Lieut. Emile Ducharme, who also served on the morality squad under Mr. Saulnier, testified earlier this week that on April 3, 1967, a Martha Adams, who was under arrest at the time on charges of living off the avails of prostitution, made a sworn statement concerning Mr. Saulnier.

Cpl. Couture also testified that he informed Mr. Saulnier on Oct. 24, 1966, that the morality squad was divided into two groups which were not collaborating with each other and that one group sometimes hindered the work of the other.

One group was composed of four men, himself, Lieut. Ducharme, constables Leo Villeneuve and Roland Clermont, while the other group constituted "the rest of the squad, or about 40 men."

He said the group of four had planned a raid on a suspected bawdy house, but when they arrived at the establishment they found everyone had vanished.

Cpl. Couture added, however, that he had no concrete evidence that squad members had warned the prostitutes in advance of the raid.

During the conversation with Mr. Saulnier, a discussion ensued on alleged prying into the captain's activity in an attempt to find evidence of wrongdoing, and Mr. Saulnier "became angry," Mr. Couture said.

Mr. Couture said Mr. Saulnier had admitted he had differences with Lieut. Ducharme.

"He ended the talk by telling me that there were plenty of Villeneuves, Coutures and Ducharmes and not many Saulniers, but there was one across the street who was very important."

Jacques Saulnier is the brother of Lucien Saulnier, former head of the City of Montreal executive committee and now holder of the same post in the Montreal Urban Community, the administration which oversees the city and its 29 suburbs.

COLD IN MIAMI brings out the unusual sight of winter clothes in the usually warm resort area. With the temperature dipping into the low 40s, Richard Potter uses an arctic type parka to ward off the chilly winds.

SPRING START SEEN FOR MAINLAND TUNNEL

VANCOUVER (CP) — There will be no plebiscite on the building of a third crossing of Burrard Inlet, linking the city and the north shore, Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday.

Mayor Campbell said after a meeting with representatives of the three north shore municipalities and environment Minister Jack Davis that he feels construction on the tunnel crossing can begin possibly this spring.

North Vancouver city Mayor Tom Reid, North Vancouver district Mayor Ron Andrews and West Vancouver alderman Don Lanskail, attended the meeting.

The proposed crossing has come under fire from groups who say it does not contain enough provision for rapid transit. Other groups have attacked the plan because they feel the Greater Vancouver area will grow most in the south and east rather than to the north.

Davis said the federal government's feeling is that it should not interfere in the local decision on whether or not to build the crossing and that elected representatives on various councils are capable of assessing the feeling of the public without a plebiscite.

He said the federal government does want provision for a future rapid transit facility included in the proposed crossing, adding that the federal government's contribution to the crossing financing "will be available when the formal agreement is signed."

Highway Blamed

HANEY (CP) — A coroner's jury has ruled that the highways department was "grossly negligent" in marking a section of highway where a Port Moody woman was killed last month.

Dorothy E. Morrissey, 59, was killed in an accident Jan. 5 at the Pallot Creek bridge on the Lougheed Highway when a car driven by her husband, Emerson Morrissey, crashed into a guardrail and landed upside down in the creek.

In its verdict, the jury said "persons responsible for marking the highway for the dark hours were grossly negligent and that situation still exists." A number of accidents have occurred recently at the bridge reconstruction site, where the highway narrows to two lanes from four.

New Chairman

KELOWNA (CP) — Ken Bawtree of Enderby was elected chairman of the Okanagan Basin water board. He succeeds Wally C. Bennett of Kelowna, chairman of the Central Okanagan regional district. Bawtree is chairman of the North Okanagan regional district.

Grant Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $250,000 grant for increased capacity of open-heart operations at St. Paul's Hospital has been approved by the Greater Vancouver Regional District. The money will be used to provide a 15-bed cardiac surgery nursing unit where patients will be cared for after open-heart operations.

Escort Needed

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — RCMP escorted a British Columbia Hydro survey crew on to a farmer's property in a dispute over the power utility's attempt to acquire land for construction of a power line between here and Fort St. John.

The survey crews asked for police protection after two farmers' wives, one of them backed up by a rifle, ordered the survey crews off the property. The farmers claim Hydro is not offering adequate compensation for the 41.6-mile line.

No Blame Attached

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury said Friday that lack of proper safety procedures and proper supervision caused the death of Jose Daponte Moreira, a Pacific Great Eastern Railway employee. He died last month when a cable broke and a load of railway ties dropped on him in the PGE yards. No blame was attached in the death.

Permit Opposed

PENTICTON (CP) — The Okanagan Basin Water Board strongly opposed a pollution control permit application from the provincial trout hatchers at Summerland and urges that the outfall from the hatchery be entirely eliminated from Okanagan Lake. The hatchery is applying to dump about one million gallons of outfall daily 600 feet from the shore.

4-Year Ban on Herring Near End for Fishermen

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

At noon Tuesday commercial fishermen will be setting nets for herring for the first time since 1968, ending a ban imposed because of dwindling stocks.

Between 80 and 90 boats are expected to start heading for the fishing grounds 10 a.m. Sunday.

A meeting has been called for today by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union. The fishermen are demanding answers to some immediate problems.

The most important is that of the allocation of crews to the boats.

EXCEPTION

One local exception is Spence Huson, 1007 Redfern. He and five others will operate on their own, using his 61-foot drum-seiner May S.

Huson is not convinced that reopening the fishery is a wise move at this time. He says, however, "Everyone is doing it so we have to go along."

He adds, "If we don't catch fish, though, we won't be eating."

The department of fisheries imposed the ban in 1968 on the insistence of fishermen, alarmed at the way in which stocks were disappearing.

The decceleration of the fishery was dramatic — dropping from a catch of 265,647 tons in 1964 to 16,540 tons in 1967.

TOO SOON

The department has set a ceiling of 105,000 tons for this season, the season to end immediately that figure has been reached.

Huson and some of his fellow fishermen are concerned that it may still be too soon to open up the fishing because of the role the herring plays in the marine world. They're often called the "mice of the sea" because they are the main source of food for such commercial species as salmon, halibut and cod.

In 1967 there were 100 boats fishing for salmon, employing 1,200 fishermen and shore workers in 10 reduction plants.

Although the ban is lifted there will be no fishing for reduction plant purposes. Herring will only be used for food or bait.

One new program is going to provide a boost to the city's economy.

Large quantities will be exported to Japan and the Wharf Street firm of Oakland Industries will be one of those involved in the separation of roe from the rest of the fish, the roe then being shipped to Japan in temperature-controlled containers aboard ships.

100 JOBS

An Oakland Industries spokesman estimates the roe-separating plant will add an extra 100 women to their payrolls.

The Japanese market promises to be a lucrative one for fishermen. Huson says, "The price they're offering is so good, you can't afford to turn it down."

A United Workers' official in Vancouver said Friday that, to make sure they get the type of roe they need, a Japanese technician will be aboard half of the fleet's boats.

"The herring have to be caught as close to their natural spawning time as possible so they'll be on board to see this is done."

He estimates that between 30,000 to 40,000 tons of herring will be used for this purpose.

A much smaller amount will be used for an experimental program in a Steveston plant where a company project will be to can the herring along the lines of methods used in various parts of Europe.

Jaycee Head In Victoria

Douglas G. Lewis, a 33-pear-old lawyer from Orillia, Ont., met local Jaycees for breakfast and then travelled to Nanaimo and Campbell River for a banquet tonight.

Gathering Round the Tree

Almost any Bennett budget can be interpreted as an election budget, but the one brought down yesterday exceeds most in the volume of its scatter-gun generosity. Nearly everyone will be the recipient of largesse in one form or another. If we can forget where the money comes from—not easy as the T-1 forms come in—we can only conclude: "Yes, British Columbia, there IS a Santa Claus."

It is only three years since this province broke through the billion-dollar ceiling in annual expenditures, yet already we are dealing in estimates totalling more than $1.45 billion, which is some $150 million more than last year. It is either a measure of the province's basic prosperity or the patience of its taxpayers, but once again Mr. Bennett has been able to dig into large surplus fund accumulations and provide an additional $115 millions for, as he describes it, creating employment.

In his system of perpetual and special funds, Mr. Bennett has come up with a handy device. It enables the government to hold large sums in reserve, earning interest which is devoted to the particular business at hand. Insofar as these funds can be invested in short-term government obligations they provide a useful source of money for development of schools and hospitals—particularly for a province that has no debt. (In the latter connection, it is interesting to learn that the borrowing power of the PGE will be increased by $100 millions, and that of B.C. Hydro by $500 millions.)

In its perpetual funds — including those for Indian advancement, for aid to foreign countries, for fitness and sports, for cultural activities in this province, and for combatting drugs, alcohol and cigarette use — the province now has a total of $85 millions. These have now become, as Mr. Bennett describes them, an integral "part of this Social Credit Government's financial policy." There are also "special funds" — most of them of $25 millions each — which are expended on various purposes within the province.

A new one of these is the proposed Power Line Beautification Fund, whose $10 millions will provide one-third of the cost of putting power lines underground in municipalities, the rest to be provided equally by the municipality and the power utility. This, like the funds for acquisition of green belts, for acceleration of reforestation, and for accelerated park acquisition, may prove very useful, particularly on this Island.

Mr. Bennett makes an interesting bid to terminate B.C. Hydro's involvement in urban street transportation by offering to have the government pay half the annual deficit on any municipally or regionally owned and operated rapid transit service. This would mean that Vancouver or Victoria, for instance, would have to assume ownership of the local bus services — a position they will seek desperately to avoid even with the promise of help with the losses.

Like most plans to spend public money, many of the projected expenditures will be criticized on the grounds that the money should have been spent otherwise. Chief among these may be the $50 addition to the home-owners grant for persons over 65. The criticism will be, of course, that this discriminates against senior citizens who rent their homes. But by now Mr. Bennett is used to the fact that while everybody loves Santa Claus in theory, most people figure they could do a better job.

Full Treatment

A senator from Virginia, William Spong, suggested last fall that the post of assistant secretary for Canadian affairs be created in the U.S. State Department. This would supersede the present arrangement in which the "Canadian Desk" is, for some reason or other, part of the bureau of European affairs. The State Department has turned down Sen. Spong's suggestion as impractical, remarking further that ". . . the state department does give Canadian affairs the full and fair treatment they deserve." Nonetheless, the department is keeping the matter under review.

A mere rearranging of machinery would not, in itself, help or hinder relations between Canada and the U.S., but Sen. Spong's observation that the failure to give greater attention to Canadian grievances and policies is another instance of "benign neglect" from Washington is well put. Timely respect by Washington for our mutual interdependence would be an antidote to the present desultory American interest in things Canadian.

How Wide a Gap?

A poll of 3,000 young Americans, aged 14 to 25, in 72 different geographical areas, does not reject entirely the currently popular theory of a generation gap. It does, however, cast some doubts on the width or depth of the gap and suggests that youth's values in the United States today are not dramatically different from those of earlier years.

Undertaken by the Institute of Life Insurance in New York, the results of the probing, summarized by the Associated Press, show that a majority of young people think woman's place is in the home, find the hippie life style unappealing, are concerned about their future financial security, and think people ought to be self-supporting, not dependent on government or parents.

"We tend to confuse superficial manifestations of change with change," says Dr. Harold Edrich, director of the survey. "If you look at the basics, there's more continuity than change . . . The old-fashioned values of marriage, family, financial security, savings, a good job—those are the ones to which the great majority still subscribe."

The comment does not mention the fact that earlier generations of young people contained members who did not subscribe to those values. There has always been dissidence and there has always been a change in attitudes stemming from the maturing processes. But at least the survey helps to refute the generalization that the young generation is heading for perdition, as the conventional see it, at a rate never before achieved.

The findings are a useful reminder that sweeping assessments of young people are often inexact. It depends on which "youth" group is being considered — and the majority seldom is spectacular enough to claim the headlines.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Mr. Snifkin Finds Security

My neighbor Horace Snifkin has long distrusted the government's economic reports and therefore undertook a nation-wide survey of his own.

He first interviewed the famous captain of industry, Clarence J. Glutt, over a simple four-course lunch in the executive dining room of Gigantic Supercorporation Inc., on Bay Street, Toronto. Mr. Glutt explained that the Canadian economy was suffering from the lazy habits of the working people.

"They don't work like they used to," he said, and produced figures and charts to prove his point. By the time he finished his lunch, wine, cigar and explanation it was three o'clock in the afternoon.

"The working hours of industry are just too short for efficiency nowadays," Mr. Glutt concluded. "And another problem is the immobility of labor. The workers won't go where the jobs are, out in the healthy wilderness. The spirit of adventure is dead in Canada."

Unfortunately Mr. Glutt was unable to continue the conversation because he had to catch a plane for his winter resort in Bermuda where he will rest and recuperate until spring.

Reasonable Increase

Mr. Snifkin then called at the modest home of Joseph Doakes, president of a powerful labor union. Mr. Doakes being absent, Mr. Snifkin talked to Mrs. Doakes, a keen student of economics. She explained that the national economy was suffering from excessively high prices.

"Take our own case," she said. "We'd buy a new house but we can't afford the price. Construction costs are just running wild. Besides, my husband is out of a job right now. His union of carpenters is on strike for a wage increase of 50 per cent, a very reasonable figure."

At this point Mr. Doakes returned home and informed Mr. Snifkin that the real underlying dilemma of the economic system was the monopoly power of big business and the weakness of the unions. The government should break up the business monopolies, he said, and force all workers to join unions before they were allowed to work at any trade.

"What we need," he added, "is more freedom and flexibility in collective bargaining so that every worker can choose his own future for himself without interference. And there should be a freeze on prices but not, of course, on wages because they have no significant effect on prices."

Mr. Snifkin decided to widen his survey and study the problems of the unorganized workers. In the dressing room of a Vancouver cabaret he interviewed Miss Lucille Labelle (nee Smith), a talented topless dancer, who, rather disappointingly, was fully clothed at the moment.

"All I'm paid in this lousy joint," she said, "is $2.50 an hour for dancing nude, if you'd believe it. A plumber gets twice as much with all his clothes on. And what has a plumber got that I haven't got?"

LUCILLE LABELLE
. . . what's a plumber got?

The topless dancers of the nation, she suggested, must form a trade union and seek social justice. But to Mr. Snifkin's surprise she argued that the government was over-taxing the higher-income brackets.

"The only guys that watch our show," she said, "are rich guys, past middle age, married and respectable. If they weren't taxed so high we'd pack 'em in every night and our business would boom. That fellow Benson didn't understand economics, I guess."

Mr. Snifkin then called on a leading Ottawa doctor who said that the unions were destroying the country. He could not go into the problem deeply, however, since he was engaged in negotiations with the government, on behalf of the medical profession, for higher fees.

The chairman of the lawyers' society in Halifax gave Mr. Snifkin the same opinion — the unions were destroying the country. But this distinguished barrister was also too busy to explore the problem at length. He had to attend an emergency meeting of his organization to discuss the inadequate financial rewards of its members.

Somewhat confused by all these facts, Mr. Snifkin called on Prime Minister Trudeau, who assured him that there was no real economic trouble in Canada.

"The Canadian economy," Mr. Trudeau said, "has performed better than any in the Western world. Our prices are rising slower than those in other countries, only five per cent last year. Sure, we'd prefer that they didn't rise at all but when our rate of ruin is so relatively low what's the public complaining about?"

Specifically Stanfield

Robert Stanfield was even more specific in his answers.

"I don't want to exaggerate," he said, "but after long thought I'm gradually becoming convinced that the problem of inflation is quite serious. And I say without reservation that the government should solve it."

Mr. Snifkin recalled that he had bought some bonds 20 years ago and, in purchasing power, they already had lost about a third of their value. Now, he observed, all bonds were losing value at five per cent annually.

"Where's your patriotism?" the broker demanded, rather indignantly. "The government has to borrow a billion dollars this year to cover its budgetary deficit. Someone must buy its bonds. Are you suggesting that the government's solemn contract with the bond holder will be broken? A shameful thought for a Canadian citizen!"

In a quick mental calculation Mr. Snifkin realized that he might earn about six per cent interest on bonds and the government would take half of it in taxes. Then inflation would take the rest and more.

"Never mind that," said the broker, "When you buy government bonds you buy security. At your age you can't afford to gamble."

So Mr. Snifkin bought bonds and came home much comforted by his survey. As he told me, he now felt secure.

ART STOTT

Song of the Wanderers

Years before the Wandervogel gave their cheerful song to a world that needed a lift — "I wave my hand to all who pass and they wave back to me" — North American young people sang and danced to an earlier "Song of the Wanderer." It was a doleful tune of unrequited love — "Where can I go when I go where I go . . ."

And years before either, the Oak Bay Wanderers effected an unconscious combination of the two themes. Ebullient, sometimes to the point of boisterousness, they greeted life and humanity with a laugh, a shout and a slap on the back vigorous enough to knock a strong man to his knees. But they were usually homeless. They still are.

Occasionally they enjoyed a sort of nomadic tenancy of premises. The clubrooms before the Second World War, recalls a veteran, were a small house opposite Windsor Park to the west. But when the war broke out the Wanderers joined up and there was no one left to pay the rent.

Where They Hung Hats

Home, to the various generations, was a relative abstract. They found it on any rugby field in the municipality or anywhere they could have hung their hats, if they'd had hats. They could preempt a booth or two at Terry's on a Saturday night and swagger through vocal replays of their titanic intermediate rugby battles of the afternoon, limping like heroes. But tenancy usually ended in time to catch the last streetcar from town shortly before midnight. When they could borrow a family car the wandering could continue until the early hours of the morning, winding up at the Met, the Poodle Dog or the New England. And then Terry's went the way of many good institutions in a changing world.

The Wanderers knew where they were going on the rugby pitch. Off it, destinations were less definite, though house parties and private dances at the Yacht Club included the boys who started games in white uniforms and finished them in impressionistic smears of mud and occasional blood from bumped noses. Fine fellows, ably described in a phrase by Rabelais, though their game was ruggah, not nine-pins.

Their approach to life seemed to be patterned on their game style. They played it hard, ran straight, took and handed out bruises with impartial generosity — and very frequently produced a stylish performance. With boys like Reg and Godfrey Wenman, Campbell Forbes, Jack Goodacre, Ronnie McConnan, Bill Gornall and the like making transient appearances, along with life-time stalwarts like "Sonny" Symons, Dudley King, Dick Ellis and old Oak Bay High grads, it was bound to be a mixture of sound rugby and hell-for-leather assault.

Through its lifetime, the club has wandered in and out of the senior league, but the heyday of its intermediate years came in the late 'twenties when arch rivals were the boys from University School — whose ranks incidentally also contributed to the Wanderers after the boys left school.

The reward of service with the team was fellowship and sheer, unqualified enjoyment. Beads on the necklace of memory for many of them today are recollections of the drop-goal from outside the twenty-five, a smooth inside run, selling the dummy, a streaking dash down the wing, the pounding rush of the pack and bone-crunching tackles, given and taken cheerfully.

Now the Wanderers are looking for a home again. They'd like some location where they could gather after practices and after games to brag out the scintillating displays on the field, and to entertain visiting fifteens and individuals.

It seemed fitting when John Wenman made the club's pitch for acquisition of a Saanich property for clubrooms the other evening. The Wenman name is writ large in Wanderers history. Two generations of the family have represented a lot of what was best in the club.

Liquor Question

Unfortunate that the spokesman was asked by one member of the group hearing the appeal if liquor would be consumed on the premises. The reply was reasonably forthright. It probably would be on occasions. But the question disclosed a certain nervousness.

There are times when rugby players enjoy a quiet drink. And there are instances in which neighbors might wonder how frequently the adjective should be applied.

When and if the Wanderers get a clubhouse, it will not be as sedate as those venerable leather-armchaired quarters where retired imperialists scan The Times of London and break the silence with infrequent "Egads" after reading of some republican impugning the monarchy. The Wanderers are not now, never have been, and, pray heaven, never will be that close to perpetual somnolence.

Yet surely there must be some place in this community where healthy, robust, games-playing young men can gather for social activity, even if membership tends to the extrovert — provided the boys meet their own costs. Or are we wedded solely to publicly-supported centres for the unfortunates who must be charitably weaned away from the problems of their introversions?

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

FREEMAN KING

Last Saturday members of the intermediate section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society held a "tracking session" in the snow at Francis Park.

Among tracks that were found and identified — and their story read — were deer. The difference between those of the doe and the buck was noticed. The buck's were more widely spread and more rounded. The does were sharper in outline and pointed. A last year's fawn tracks were also found, but its sex could not be determined.

The rather dainty hand prints in the snow were those of a raccoon. It could be distinguished when the animal was walking or running for prints of the running animal did not overlap as did those when the animal was walking. It could be seen where the raccoon had searched under a log perhaps for grubs or even some beetles hiding there.

There seems to be an increase of rabbits in the park. Their tracks were numerous. One could see where the large hind leg had overprinted the forepaws and where the rabbit had dug out a small "nest or form" to rest awhile.

The squirrel tracks indicated where they were walking or running. Running, the front feet are placed side by side and walking they are variable.

There were tracks of cats. Perhaps they were just on the hunt or maybe they were some that had been abandoned and left to forage for themselves. They do not leave toe prints like a dog.

There were many dog prints as well, also the "scent post" left by a tree or a rock, as much as to say "This is my territory, stay out." One set indicated the dog was not in any way under control, for it ranged far and wide. By the size of the prints it was an Alsatian or a large dog of that type. The tracks and the scent post told that story.

WIDGEON TRACKS
. . . writing in the snow

The mice tracks were fascinating. One could see where they ran or walked in many places with their long tails dragging in the snow.

Bird tracks abounded. You could tell the walkers like the pheasant with its stately tread and the large prints of the toes, and the crows with their rather wide print, sometimes just hopping.

The presence of woodpeckers was evident from the new holes punched into an old log or standing tree. There was one, possibly a downy, that had come under the shelter of the nature house and pecked away at a short block of Douglas fir. The bird had drilled many holes in the wood. There must have been many beetles or termites hiding there. The "trackers" also found prints of a ruffed grouse where it had fed under an arbutus tree.

'Many people are honestly upset by what they think is happening to films.'

PRESS GALLERY
peter mcnelly

Not content to have gone after topless dancers, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson now is going after dirty movies.

He's having a special legislative committee created to study the problem of film classification in B.C. It looks like the attorney-general decided he'd had enough abuse on the topless issue and decided to take the counter-offensive.

As long as he was being branded a Puritan, why not go all the way and take on the decline in Hollywood's moral standards?

It's an easy, cheap and safe target. Besides, many people are honestly upset by what they think is happening to films.

These are the people who have been writing to Peterson, telling him how deeply they were shocked that Saturday night when they went to the movies for the first time in 10 years and discovered all the new Doris Days were taking their clothes off.

Under pressure like that, B.C.'s chief law enforcement officer ripped into action with the speed of Clark Kent transformed into a moral Superman.

"I have received complaints about the decline in quality of films as it relates to greater violence or this sort of thing," Peterson told the legislature.

The dirty and violent movie committee is certain to attract much press attention. Peterson admitted as much last week when he jokingly said he'd have to find a way to schedule its hearings so the press wouldn't ignore all the other committees.

Given the frankness of many of today's films and many people's objections to frank displays of sex and violence, movies are going to get a hard ride in this committee.

But it won't be the first time the Socreds have put on their bluenose costumes. In March, 1969, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings said B.C. motion picture director Ray McDonald should ban more films.

Skillings added many restricted films should never have been permitted to enter the province. That same month Peterson suggested a separate film category of "garbage" should be created

And John Tisdalle (SC—Saanich and the Islands) said McDonald had seen so many films he tended to let things pass which should be cut out.

We can be certain that the government members of this committee will take their cue from Peterson's remarks in the house last week and condemn sex and violence in films.

▣

It will be most interesting to see what films, if any, are brought before this legislative early show, and how wide a range of points of view the committee hears.

This may largely depend on whom the government chooses for chairman.

Some people will be happy that this committee has been created. But Variety reported in a recent issue that more than 50 per cent of today's movie audience is under 25 years old.

These people wouldn't go to movies if they didn't like them, and if everything we hear about young people's disenchantment with "the system" is true, they couldn't care less about the hearings of a dreary legislative committee.

If these people vote at all, they aren't likely to vote Social Credit, but the committee isn't aimed to placating them.

No matter what it recommends, the committee will give the government the appearance of having approached the question of what is going on in the film industry today.

The New Democrats and Liberals are left with the problem of arguing against further censorship in the face of apparent rising discontent with movies.

Hopefully they'll have enough sense to take clear stands against any retrograde steps and leave the tennis shoe vote to the party beyond reason.

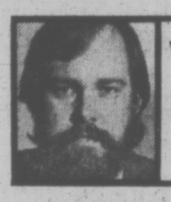
Pay Heed, City Suitors



WEEK IN CITY HALL
clement chapple

Understanding the new administration at No. 1 Centennial Square has obviously been difficult for some of the endless stream of people who annually come soliciting funds or other favors.

Two individuals this week received nasty bites when they extended their hands towards the public coffers. These men represented unimpeachable causes, you understand — the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, and Victorian Days, reputed to be Victoria's answer to the Calgary Stampede.

Let's not deny it. The difference at city hall is Mayor Peter Pollen. Well-wishers who popped in soon after Jan. 1 might have got the hint when they found the mayor's desk had been moved to the opposite end of his office.

There's no doubt at all, that with Pollen mayor, pleasing him is crucial to success at city hall.

Not everyone is a mayor-watcher, and everyone can't be expected to know how to approach the delicate subject of how to get sympathy at city hall.

So from one whose job it is to be a mayor-watcher, a few hints may be in order.

The first rule is a must, because if it is not followed carefully, your request could very well be rejected without discussion:

Bring documentation and support material. But also send it beforehand. Send it to the mayor, and any aldermen whose committee work touches on your subject.

Then try phoning up — before you come into make the verbal presentation — to ask if the material is adequate grounds for a decision by council.

A brief explanatory letter won't do, especially if you are asking for a grant. Never claim you have the backing of a bank or other financial institution without fairly frank letters of recommendation from these. (Send photocopies beforehand and bring the originals along in person.)

The latter is especially important in applications for land rezoning or special building permits that have the flavor of speculation. In fact, if you are a speculator, wait until Victoria has a new mayor.

When making your verbal presentation, "avoid slogans and generalizations and appeals to "motherhood" sentiments, no matter how justified your request.

Try reading a few lines of T. S. Eliot or Dylan Thomas while you roast in the anteroom awaiting council's pleasure.

However, with all this mystery, sprinkle your presentation sparingly with sudden, incisive comments that reveal your command of the subject. Pedantry simply won't get you anywhere.

These are the basics. If they don't work, avoid asking for money, permits, appointments, speaking appearances, special treatment and the like, and city hall won't give you any trouble at all.

Hospital Workers Over Barrel

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

When you come right down to it, there's a world of difference between the right to strike — and the right to exercise that right.

In the interests of collective bargaining, the law (the Mediation Commission Act) permits the right to strike. Only civil servants are specifically prohibited.

So, a lot of people in what are generally considered to be essential services — such as fire and police and hospitals — do have the right to strike.

On paper.

But the law (the Mediation Commission Act) also provides for the contingency that the (paper) right to strike might actually be implemented. In such a case, where it is deemed necessary to protect the public interest and welfare, the cabinet can order a strike not to start, or stop one which has started.

The union was then in a quandary — obey the law, or defy it.

It decided to obey the law, and in so doing illustrated that there is no practical or legal right to strike a hospital in such a way that it would be closed.

This illustrated the dilemma of people working in essential services.

If there really is no practical right to strike and shut the place down, what incentive is there for either side in a dispute to reach a settlement, rather than sitting back and awaiting the inevitable binding arbitration? Just the goodwill of both sides.

But if there is a practical right to strike and suspend essential services, how can the public (in this case, the sick) be protected?

The law made the decision in favor of the public, in this case.

The union might well have to re-think its attitudes towards the (paper) right to strike.

This has already happened with some para-medical hospital workers, whose new union, Health Sciences Association, binds itself never to strike.

In a telling comment, a spokesman for the association has said the semantic nonsense of a strike right should be set aside and the air cleared. There simply can't be a strike in a hospital which closes the hospital, or hurts the sick. The public and the government just won't permit it.

The other view is that the right to strike, even if only on paper, should be maintained for all workers because to specifically prohibit such action by statute is akin to bondage. The law can then be used to protect the public in the event a strike is threatened or occurs in an essential service.

Always to be remembered, however, is that no-strike directives can — and have — been defied, and this can leave a government in a position of simply being unable to carry out the law.

In 1970, for example, six construction unions with 25,000 members openly defied a cabinet order to return to work. Negotiations were necessary — the unions agreed to ask the men to return, and the government agreed to postpone enforcement of the law.

This brings the focus back to where it should be — on reasonableness and the merits of any case, albeit there can be honestly-held differences.

Unreasonable impositions on any group of people will inevitably create a backlash. The intelligent approach (not too evident in the government's 6.5 per cent pay and fringe benefit pay ceiling for hospital workers, many of whom are only earning just over $100 a week) is to forestall the backlash by reasonableness, not by imposition. This applies to managements, unions and government alike.

Whopping Surplus On Way for 1972

Iriterim financial statements for this nine months ended Dec. 31, 1971, show a surplus of $61.2 million.

That amount was in addition to the $110 million in accumulated surpluses on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year.

The nine-month surplus consisted of $35.6 million of regular budgetary revenue and $25.6 million in "accelerated payments under federal capital assistance agreement."

Total revenues in the period was $1.069 billion and total expenditure was $1.008 billion.

Bennett is his budget last year estimated total expenditures for the current year at $1.3 billion, but he usually exceeds his estimates by several millions.

The nine-month returns show the new cigarette and tobacco tax that went into effect early in 1971 produced $13.7 million. It appears to be on target for Bennett's estimate of $18.5 million for the full year.

The new hotel and motel room tax produced $3 million in the first nine months, already exceeding the $2.5 million full year estimate.

Medicare Estimates 'Fix' Doctor Fees

Medicare estimates for fiscal year 1972-73 do not appear to account for an increase in doctors' fees, figures tabled in the legislature indicate Friday.

Estimates for the coming fiscal year say the provincial government will spend $85 million for medicare, or $15 million more than it would spend for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972.

But the government's interim financial statements through Dec. 31, 1971 show medicare payments are running at a rate of $77.5 million for this fiscal year.

This means the government almost certainly will spend more than it said it would last February, and for this reason the medicare appropriation can be expected to exceed $85 million during the 1972-73 fiscal year.

The estimate relating to medicare also do not reflect the substantial federal aid British Columbia receives.

The annual statement of the Medical Service Commission which administers the plan shows that in the last fiscal year Ottawa contributed almost $52 million and the province only $17 million.

Premier Bennett's statements at a press conference Friday following the budget speech show why the medicare bill does not include a fee increase for doctors.

Bennett said this year's budget will allow doctors to make more money this coming year on at least a 10 per cent over-all basis.

But this figure can account only for the increase in doctors in the province and an increased use of diagnostic facilities and certain operations such as sterilizations and therapeutic abortions.

"I suggest that doctors should accept the same percentage of fee increases as last year," Bennett said.

The B.C. Medical Association did not increase its fee schedule in 1971, so Bennett's statement indicates he does not want to pay fees on the new schedule, one which is 8.2 per cent greater, the BCMA introduced last month.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Record annual expenditure of $1.45 billion from current revenue — up 12 per cent — and a further $116 million from revenue surpluses for a total of $1.56 billion in expenditures.
- A $15 increase in annual homeowner grant to $185 and an additional $50 for homeowners over 65.
- A new $25 million special fund for greenbelt preservation.
- A $10 million Accelerated Reforestation Fund for job-creation and $10 million for the Accelerated Parks Development Fund, restoring it to $15 million.
- A $10 million fund for putting power and telephone lines underground on an equal cost-sharing basis with municipalities and utilities.
- An extra $10 million for perpetual funds and $25 million for home acquisition grants and loans.
- Higher exemptions under the Succession Duty Act and 10-year interest free tax payment periods for family farms and businesses.
- A $25 million investment in new share capital of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

Premier Bennett's $50 extra for home-owning pensioners is "just relief for a small minority of old people," Silver Threads director Pauline Barker said today.

Mrs. Parker said most members of Silver Threads are tenants, and there should have been something for them.

"I wish there was also something for drugs and prescriptons."

Homeowners over 65 will now get a total grant of $235, compared to homeowners under 65 who now will get $185, a $15 increase over last year.

Mrs. Parker said she was pleased, though, about the increased aid to elderly homeowners.

"It will help those on the borderline for another year, at least."

Clara Dawson, president of the Victoria Tenants Association, said Bennett, in his budget, continues to discriminate against tenants, despite many pleas made to him.

"He's just not interested in tenants. I can't undersatnd it. There's so many tenants these days."

She said taxes will have to be increased to pay for the grants, and this will come largely out of tenant pockets.

She noted, too, in her experience, that when a homeowner is taxed $1 more, he'll up the rent on the tenant between $5 and $10.

Health Bill Up 11.5%

Premier Bennett estimated Friday British Columbia's total health bill excluding doctors' and fees will increase 11.5 per cent in the 1972-73 fiscal year.

Estimates tabled in the legislature Friday for the coming fiscal year show the government intends to spend $294.67 million on this phase of health care.

Payments to hospitals will go to an estimated $230 million, up 12.2 per cent.

Spending for in-patient mental health care is estimated to go up $3.38 million to $38.68 million this year. Grants for public health services are up $1.3 million to $17.77 million.

Under this total, $100,000 will be spent for narcotic addiction treatment centres, $600,000 for public health research, $713,000 in grants for health agencies and $100,000 for cancer control.

Socred Charges Discrimination

Premier Bennett Friday rejected criticism from his own backbench on the value of his budget proposals to tenants.

Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) said the budget was "doubly discriminatory" to tenants because it increases aid to homeowners while doing nothing to help tenants.

The $15 increase in the homeowner grant and an extra $50 above that for homeowners over 65 will place a proportionately higher burden on tenants to pay for local services, Capozzi said.

The move will also increase the discrimination against communities, particularly Victoria and Vancouver, with a higher than average tenant population, Capozzi said. Those communities will get relatively less provincial aid from the government than other communities, he said.

Tenants should get grants to help them pay rents, which include indirect tax payments, Capozzi said.

Bennett said later, when told of Capozzi's criticism, that it was a "tenant's budget" because it not only helps tenants to buy their own homes but increases the incentive to own a home.

"We use the carrot — it (increased grant) is an inducement to buy a home."

Small Welfare Hike

Officially, Premier Bennett's welfare estimates for 1972-73 predict a minimal increase, up $500,000 to $120.5 million.

But the figure is almost entirely misleading, because B.C. spent nearly $14 million more on welfare two years ago. Interim financial statements tabled in the legislature Friday show B.C.'s social assistance payment bill for the current fiscal year is likely to be $144 million, or nearly $24 million than Bennett says he's going to spend next year.

The 1972-73 estimate of social allowance payments suggests Bennett may be expecting welfare rolls to decline this year as the economy picks up.

Bennett's new budget does not provide for an increase in welfare rates. Rates were last increased in 1970 by $5 per case unit.

Estimates for 1972-73 also show no increase in provincial social workers has been provided. This means caseloads will continue at record levels unless welfare rolls decline.

The Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's job-finding agency, continues to underspend its $500,000 budget, according to financial statements through Dec. 31, 1971.

Total estimated expenditure by the rehabilitation department for 1972-73 is $126.5 million. Under a federal-provincial-municipal financing formula, the province's share of welfare costs is 35 per cent.

This means that B.C. would directly pay only $42.1 million of the $120.5 million it has estimated for welfare payments in the coming fiscal year.

Under the formula, Ottawa pays 50 per cent and municipalities pay the remaining 15 per cent.

Pollution Staff Doubles

Premier Bennett's 1972-73 budget Friday indicated pollution control branch staff will more than double during the coming fiscal year.

Estimates for the PCB operations for the coming year show the government will hire 100 additional persons, bringing staff totals to 185.

Estimated PCB budget for 1972-73 is $2.55 million. Of this amount, $1.8 million will go toward staff salaries.

Last year the government budgeted $1.14 million for pollution control. Through Dec. 31, 1971, only $635,819 has been spent.

At this rate, the government would underspend its 1971-72 PCB budget by $300,000.

Most of these people were hired later in the year, but last year's estimates allowed ful salaries for all 85 positions. This is why PCB spending is down from last year's estimates.

BENNETT'S BIG SHOW THEATRICAL SUCCESS

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Premier Bennett likes to have things his own way, particularly on budget day.

Bennett beamed and bristled through the reading of Social Credit's 20th provincial budget Friday as he announced a record spending program of $1.56 billion and a record budget of $1.45 billion.

The opposition sat across the floor, looking officially glum, pretending to be bored, but paying better attention, perhaps, than they would to any other speech for the rest of the session.

Last year Strachan threw a proper fit before Speaker William Murray when Bennett chanted the rules and refused to release the estimates until the speech was finished.

The house flew into an uproar, and Strachan stalked out after the Speaker cited an obscure reason why the estimates should be withheld.

Bennett was clearly upset, his performance pearly having been upstaged by an angered opposition. He didn't let it happen again this year.

Strachan got his estimates, and the budget spech was a smashing threatrical success.

Family Businesses Get Delayed Death Tax

Family farms and family businesses will be given 10 years to pay provincial succession duties without interest penalty under a bill introduced in the legislature Friday.

Increased exemptions are also provided under the bill but Premier Bennett declined to say how much revenue B.C. would lose under the move.

He said he didn't think a new provincial Gift Tax Act, being enacted along with most other provinces, would offset the lost revenue.

The basic exemption for "special beneficiaries" under the Succession Duty Act will be increased from the current $60,000 to $150,000 Special beneficiaries are defined as husband, wife, father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, child, grandchild, son-in-law or daughter-in-law.

The 10-year interest-free payment period is intended to help family farms and businesses to absorb the costs of succession duties without being forced into sale to pay taxes, Bennett said.

Bennett said the federal government should follow B.C.'s example and ease the effect of payment of capital gains taxes in the same instances.

The bill calls for equal instalment repayments.

Bennett repeated earlier assurances that B.C. has no intention of occupying the share of the estate tax field vacated by the federal government Dec. 31, 1971. Ottawa's estate tax collections amounted to one-third of the B.C. Sucession Duties.

A provincial Gift Tax Act was introduced by Bennett who had earlier announced B.C. would join most other provinces in passing such a bill to prevent people from circumventing payment of succession duties.

The 25-page bill sets taxes ranging from 15 per cent of aggregate taxable value of $25,000 or less in a year to a top tax bite of $63,750 plus 50 per cent of amounts by which taxable values exceed $200,000.

$15M ON ROADS

An extra $15 million for construction of roads, bridges and ferries has been alloeated for the highways department in the provincial budget unveiled Friday.

The increase would enable the department to spend $95 million on capital construction. B.C. Ferries is part of the department.

The public works department has been allocated $18 million for construction of government buildings, up from $12.5 million in the current year. This doesn't include the $27 million set aside for the proposed B.C. Building in Vancouver.

Little Mayoral Praise

Most municipal leaders in Greater Victoria found little to praise in Premier Bennett's budget speech Friday.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, least critical of the proposals, said the best news appeared to be the increases in provincial homeowners' grants — a general $15 inerease to $185 annually, and for homeowners over 65 years of age, a further $50 for a total of $235.

While other officials said this was no help to municipal government, Curtis pointed out that "people are municipalities" and the grants "certainly ease the burden" of property taxes assessed by municipalities.

'DEPRESSING'

However, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said the budget was "depressing from a municipal point of view."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said "There is nothing in that budget for municipalities."

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said he expected a little more in "direct financial help for hard-pressed municipalities."

Pollen was most openly critical. At a panel discussion Friday night not related to the budget, he said the provincial government is showing no understanding of municpal needs.

"I sat in the house today and listened to the government we've had for 20 years hand out sugar-coated inanities with no relevance to urban problems."

Asked to elaborate today, Pollen said the $25 million fund to preserve green belts might be a "step in the right direction" but its worth "depends exclusively on his (Bennett's) awareness or lack of awareness" of the necessity of developing a full green belt program.

"Where's the program? . . . here's some money, if you go through 45 hoops, maybe you'll get some."

Pollen was also skeptical of the $10 million fund to share the cost of putting utility lines underground.

Bennett's proposal is that the province will pay a third of the cost of placing hydro lines underground if B.C. Hydro pays another third and a municipality pays the final third.

'SUBSIDY'

"It's tantamount to getting the municipalities to legally subsidize B.C. Hydro," Pollen said.

Both Hydro and B.C. Telephone are well funded and profitable operations, he said. The cost of underground wiring should be borne entirely by the utility companies.

"As mayor of the capital city, I am frankly depressed by this budget."

Curtis said he saw the special help for elderly homeowners as a "direct victory" for the Union of B.C. Municipalities which acts as a collective voice for municipal governments in the province.

Curtis said the UBCM made a good case for tax relief for the elderly when he was on the executive, and in December, 1969, the premier said there was no practical way to do it."

"He has obviously been convinced of the merit of this thing."

Curtis said the next step must be some form of assistance for the tenants who cannot take advantage of homeowners' grants.

DESERVES CREDIT

He also said the UBCM deserves some credit for the promise of help to put wiring underground.

"I woulld like to see Saanich among the first to take advatage of the idea."

Curtis said the government recognized "two or three areas of real need.

"I have been more critical of previous budgets," Curtis said.

Per Capita Grant Unchanged

The per-capita grant to municipalities of $30 was not increased in Premier Bennett's 1972 budget speech Friday, but population increases will increase the total grant by $6.5 million in the coming fiscal year.

The increase is due to figures compiled in the 1971 federal census, and it brings the total per capita grant for the 1972-73 fiscal year to $53.2 million.

Provincial contributions to municipalities from the homeowner grant are expected to rise to a total of $68.37 million, up $10 million from fiscal year 1971-72.

Combined, these grants will total $121.57 million. The homeowner grant increased $15 to $185, and a $50 increase was given to homeowners aged 65 and older.

Green Belt Plan 'First Step to Awareness'

The B.C. government's plan to set up special funds for the acquisition of greenbelts and parklands is its first minor step towards environmental awareness, Rick Careless, chairman of the Victoria Sierra Club, said today.

"But over-all urban and rural environmental planning is not here yet and we hope the government is not using conservation and reacreation just to win popularity" he said. "We hope it is genuinely concerned with environment and will move steadily forward."

Careless was commenting on Premier Bennett's budget speech announcement that a $25 million Green Belt Protection Fund will be used to buy land in congested areas throughout the province.

Bennett also said $10 million will be given to the parks development program, plus another $10 million to accelerate reforestation.

A total of $5 million will be set aside for physical fitness and amateur sports.

On the green belt protection fund, Bennett declined to say that the congestion criteria meant most of the money would be spent in the Lower Mainland where MLAs from all parties have expressed concern about disappearing farmland.

The fund will be established from current or surplus government revenues.

The premier said there will be no expropriation of land, only purchases.

"It is intended these lands may be utilized mainly as parkland without camping, or forestry reserves or rented for farming purposes.

He said the restriction on camping would be to preserve open land.

The land would be "held by the Crown in right of the province as green-belt reserves" and would be intended to preserve it in perpetuity.

The special fund, unlike perpetual funds of which only the interest may be spent, would be subject to expenditure of the entire capital amount.

Careless noted that the United States today faces serious urban environmental problems because of complete disregard in the past for space and recreation.

"We hope it won't happen here," he said. "It won't if people get involved in the issues."

Judge Myrtle Saxon of Ucluelet a director of the B.C. Recreational Council, said a parks and integrated recreational program is badly needed in the province.

"An educational fund is required to show people how important recreation is to maintain an integrated society," she said. "People don't realize yet that recreation is just as important as education."

John White, president of the Victoria Scientific Poilllution and Environmental Control Society said the programs were "very good but too little, too late."

He said the protection land fund would not be able to purchase as much as it might have in the past because of the great increase in property costs.

Indirect Debt Up

It rose from $2.431 billion Dec. 31, 1970, to $2.695 billion a year later.

The bulk of the increase went for a $180 million rise in B.C. Hydro and Power Authority net debt which hit a new high of $1.9 billion.

Other increases were $33 million for the Pacific Great Eastern Railway debt, $29 million for school construction borrowings and $27 million for hospital construction.

The indirect debt consists of provincial government guarantees of debts of crown corporations and other agencies. The government does not refer to it as debt, but rather as "guarantees of investments."

LITTLE HOPES FOR BIG RAISE

The British Columbia Government Employees' Union said Friday night the provincial budget's allocation for pay increases for civil servants is $5.2 million short of what is needed to provide them parity with their federal and municipal counterparts.

The budget speech called for the provision of $7.5 million for civil service salary adjustments.

John Fryer, union general secretary, said union surveys show that an appropriation of $12.7 million in pay increases would be needed to achieve minimal parity this year for the 17,000 union members.

He said the funds provided by the government will provide increases averaging 6.5 per cent.

"Union surveys comparing provincial employees' salaries with those paid by municipal and federal governments show clearly that provincial employees deserve pay increases averaging 11 per cent — just to catch up," Fryer said.

Union negotiators are pressing for the 11-per-cent figure in current discussions with the civil service commission.

"First it was a 6.5-per-cent ceiling for teachers, then nurses and hospital employees," Fryer said. "Now its provincial employees. Mr. Bennett is practising open discrimination against public employees."

The union is to conduct a wage ratification vote in April after the civil service commission decides how much each job classification will get.

Strom Demands Alta. Session

EDMONTON (CP) — Opposition Leader Harry Strom Friday demanded an immediate session of the legislature to determine the "facts" about Alberta's financial position.

Strom, Social Credit party leader and former premier, said the Progressive Conservative government should also postpone the Stettler byelection scheduled for Feb. 14.

He told a news conference that the Conservatives have gone "a little too far" on the eve of a byelection by "leaking a story that suggests a lack of integrity on the part of the previous administration."

He was referring to a story in Friday's Calgary Albertan which says a $300-million reserve fund left by the Social Credit government is a myth. The Albertan says the reserve contains no more than $60 million.

The Conservatives ended 36 years of Social Credit rule in Alberta with a decisive election victory Aug. 30. The byelection in Stettler was called after Conservative Jack Robertson died.

Saying that the $300 million is a myth "is o slur on the past administration and on people involved in the treasury, particularly on the provincial auditor," Strom said.

Repayment Urged

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — The federal government should reimburse municipal governments for welfare payments to people who have to wait for unemployment cheques, the finance committee of city council decided Thursday.

As in many other Canadian cities, unemployment cheques have been delayed, forcing people on to the welfare rolls. If one government is late another shouldn't be penalized, an alderman said.

10,000 Eligible

REGINA (CP) — Provincial agriculture officials estimate the 10,000 Saskatchewan farmers eligible for the new federal hog subsidy will split $2.5 million.

The subsidy, announced Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau, will be paid by the agricultural stabilization board as a result of plunging hog prices in 1971.

★ ★ ★

Mills Opposed

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The Saskatchewan Wildlife Federation Thursday decided to oppose development of pulp mills in the province unless they are justified by adequate ecological studies and public hearings.

Delegates to the federation's annual convention approved a policy paper presented by Dennis Fisher of Sakatoon which said pulp mills can be blamed for considerable ecological damage in Canada, but the blame can be shared equally by governments.

Budget Grants Thin for Schools

Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon said today he is not overly impressed with Premier Bennett's budget.

The budget calls for expenditure of more than $441 million on education, an increase of about $43 million over 1971-72 spending estimates. The percentage of the total budget, however, drops this year to 30.9 per cent from last year's figure of 31.1 per cent.

"Thirty-one percent is not overly generous for education," McKinnon said. "Other provinces spend more."

He said he would like to see an end to comments about education costs taking up the entire budget within a few years.

"Education in B.C. will never use up more than 31 per cent of the budget," he said. "That's where they hold the line."

NOT SO GREAT

He said that since the homeowner grant has been increased, the actual increase in money going directly to education is not as great as it looks.

Education's share of the homeowner grant increase is about $12 million this year, he said, and this money is of no direct help to schoolboards.

McKinnon said he would have liked to have seen more money go to community colleges for capital expenses.

The Victoria school board will soon be facing a problem with its own Camosun College, which is going to need new facilities. If the provincial government is responsible for post-secondary education, he said, then it should contribute to capital costs for community colleges as much as it does for universities.

The taxpayer has enough trouble paying costs for education from kindergarten to Grade 12, he said.

Bennett's budget speech indicated a 10.8 per cent increase in education spending from 1971-72 estimates. Education estimates one year ago reprsented a 9.7 per cent increase from the 1970-71 fiscal year.

In this year's budget, the government says it will spend $22 million on community colleges, or $8 million more than last year. Operating grants to the province's three universities are up $7.5 million to $93.5 million.

But last year, Bennett increased this figure by $9 million. This means the government is spending relatively less on university education in 1972-73.

UNCHANGED

Capital construction grants to provincial universities remain unchanged at $14 million. Operating expenditures for vocational and technical schools will be down $2 million from 1971's estimate of $16.

In 1971, Bennett increased this figure by $4 million. Capital expenditures for vocational schools are up only $388,000 to $12.5 million. Capital expenses for school districts are down for the second successive year from an estimated $2.88 million in 1971 to an estimated $2.5 million this coming fiscal year.

Grants to school districts are up $28 million to $260.57 million with the bulk of the increase going to teachers' salaries.

A new item in the education budget this year is the province's share in teachers' unemployment insurance contributions, $1 million.

The University of Victoria's capital grant remains unchanged at $4 million.

In 1970, education costs were estimated at 31.5 per cent of the budget and 31.8 per cent in 1969.

Pemberton, Holmes Ltd.
1002 GOVERNMENT STREET

Beautiful Ardmore in North Saanich has quite a bit going for it. Quiet pastoral country-side, sea and mountain views—perhaps the finest weather on the coast. Looking out over Saanich Inlet is this sturdy two storey farm house. On 3.2 acres with a pleasing combination of fruit trees, shade trees and perennials. A small stable will accommodate two horses, feed and tack. The price of this property is $48,000. Additional property is available in ¾ acre increments for a total of 10.5 acres, most of it sea view.

Cabinet Shifts Encouraging

YOUR TAXES

By I. H. ASPER

Last week's Federal Cabinet changes have important implications both for the recently implemented tax reform plan as well as taxpayers themselves in their relations with the law.

In any system of tax administration, three political portfolios come into play. The most important is that of the minister of national revenue. It is his department that collects the taxes and applies the law as passed by Parliament. The officials of the department have extremely broad power for it is the judgment and discretion they apply to their job that most influence the morale and respect in which the system is held by those who must live with it, the taxpayers.

In that area the government moved wisely last year by appointing Herb Gray to the ministerial post. Relations between taxpayer and tax collector were at the lowest ebb in recent memory. The department had assumed an authoritarian and inflexible attitude, particularly toward the business community and its tax advisers. Since he arrived, largely because of his own judicial and less rigid approach, some progress had been made in restoring the lost balance and sense of fairness the department must use in its application of the tax rules.

The other two departments which come into play in making up the tax system are encountered only indirectly by the taxpayer, but their influence is even more significant. Those are the departments of finance and justice.

It is the function of the finance minister to shape the law, keep it current, design the annual amendments and updatings and, most important, decide how much tax revenue is to be raised, from which taxpayers, and by what methods.

The last corner of the triangle is the justice department. Although the average taxpayer never encounters the justice officials unless he attempts to evade his taxes, nevertheless, all disputes between taxpayer and tax department are handled by the lawyers in the Justice division, particularly if they are likely to go to court.

In a sense, this department acts as an arbitrator between the tax department and its sometimes unwilling customers. It gives rulings and advice on the interpretation of the law, and can act as a restraining influence upon the sometime over-zealous revenue collectors. This has been particularly noticeable in recent years.

There is cause for genuine pleasure in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet shifts. John Turner leaves justice to head up finance. Otto Lang leaves manpower and immigration to run justice. Taxpayers, whether or not they realize it, are the winners.

It is true that the initial reaction in legal circles at the loss of Turner from justice was initially one of apprehension. This was inspired not out of concern over his successor but because of the high degree of confidence properly accorded to Turner.

But in the appointment of Otto Lang as successor, any fears should prove groundless. Lang, a highly respected lawyer and law school dean before entering public life, brings his own credentials to the job. A committed civil libertarian, as well as an articulate spokesman for Western Canadian grievances, he is a judicial man. Taxpayers can look forward to continued fair treatment in presenting their complaints to his department.

The curious thing about Lang is that although he has been severely buffetted in the past year of so during his tenure of Wheat Board responsibility, he will still retain that responsibility. While he has suffered considerable abuse at the hands of some Western farm leaders, Lang will one day be remembered as the minister who won the 25-year old battle for a two-price wheat system for Western farmers. If he also succeeds in bringing in his farm income stabilization plan, his place in Western Canadian history will be assured.

For those taxpayers who regret the loss of Turner from the justice post, there are more who look with optimism on his prospects (and theirs) in finance. It will be during his reign that the amendments to the tax reform bill will be negotiated and put to parliament.

For those concerned with perfecting the mammoth and controversial tax reform bill, there is cause for celebration in Turner's appointment. Himself a distinguished tax lawyer prior to public life, he is well equipped to design the amendments needed to make the legislation more fair and workable. As well, he enjoys the confidence of the business community which has long felt alienated from the federal government.

In these changes, Prime Minister Trudeau has done well. Taxpayers will have reason to feel relief.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal Party.)

Enex

Steps are being taken to organize Enex Mines Ltd. as an operating oil and gas exploration-producing company, reports vice-president Ross H. MacLean.

Along with partners, Enex was successful bidder on four parcels of land auctioned by the Calgary mineral recorder last week in the Chauvin and South Joffre areas of southern Alberta.

The parcels cover a total four sections and are additional to land bought from other companies in the gas-producing area last year.

Reader's

Sales and earnings reflected improved performance by all divisions in the six months ended Dec. 31 reports Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd.

The company said sales rose from $9.47 million to $11 million and net income from $463,300 to $735,400, or from 50.2 cents to 78.3 cents a share.

At the same time, operating expenses were up from $8.48 million to $9.7 million, and taxes from $522,300 to $724,000.

Can. Perm.

Net operating income climbed 75 per cent to $9.4 million ($1.33 a share) last year compared with $5.4 million (76 cents) in 1970, reports Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. and subsidiary Canada Permanent Trust Co.

After gains on the sale of securities and other extra items, income rose to $12.7 million ($7.9 million) or $1.79 vs. $1.12 a share.

Assets rose 6 per cent to $3.57 billion, mortgage business 9 per cent to $1.2 billion and deposists 8 per cent to $1.4 billion.

Vickers

Canadian Vickers Ltd. had sharply higher net income for the year ended Nov. 30, with emphasis on heavy manufacturing since shipbuilding activities were terminated two years ago.

Total net was $1.3 million ($2.42 a share). In 1970 the company had income equal to $1.61 a share.

Orders booked into the future at Nov. 30 stood at $23.6 million compared with $25.8 million a year earlier.

Domtar

Domtar Ltd. reports net earnings of $1.8 million (eight cents a share) for 1971, down from $17.6 million ($1.17) in 1970.

The figures includes write-down of $8.7 million on company investments in two Italian companies and provision for shutdown of certain facilities at Toronto and Cornwall, Ont.

The extraordinary write-down was made in the fourth quarter during which period there was a loss of $4.2 million, compared with a profit of $4.3 million a year earlier.

Candel

Calgary-based Candel Oil Ltd., the former Canadian Delhi Oil Ltd., will be controlled by St. Joe Minerals Corp., of Cleveland, by terms of an agreement with Sohio Petroleum Co.

The purchase price for 55 per cent of Sohio's interest in Candel is about $28 million, and the Standard company's remaining holdings will be offered publically at not less than the price agreed upon with St. Joe.

Principal reason for the sale is to eliminate a possible conflict of interest through Sohio's purchase of the U.S. interests of British Petroleum Oil Corp. Both companies hold controlling interest in competing Canadian petroleum exploration companies.

Mutual

The Mutual Life Assurance Co. of Canada sold more than $1 billion in life insurance to set a sales record during 1971.

The net gain in business in force during the year was $945 million, bringing the total to $7.9 billion.

Weldwood

Weldwood of Canada Ltd., through its subsidiary, Weldwood Transportation Ltd., has bought the assets of Service Tugboats Ltd. for an unstated amount.

Five tugs of 35 to 75 feet length plus docking and office accommodation in North Vancouver are included in the sale.

Operations will serve Weldwood's log boom towing requirements at camps along the coast and six mills on the lower mainland, handling about 80 per cent of the company's traffic.

Access

A new submersible with transparent nose capable of diving to 1,025 feet will be delivered to recently-formed Toronto-based Access by Aug. 1.

Perry Submersibles Ltd. is building the craft, PS-2, which is of modular construction to enable a variety of payloads and instrumentation to be used, and has a demountable conning tower.

Access is planning to make its facilities available to resource industries and agencies for government regulation of resources, initially in Canada, but later worldwide.

GM

General Motors Corp. reports that 1971 was its second most profitable year in history, with earnings totalling $1.93 billion on record sales of $28.3 billion.

GM's record profit year was 1965, when earnings were $2.12 billion on sales of $20.7 billion.

Treasury Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — New 91-day Government of Canada treasury bills auctioned Thursday: $180 million at an average price and yield of 99.129 and 3.53 per cent. Last week, same amount and term, 99.170 and 3.36 per cent.

182-day: $40 million at 98.174 and 3.73 per cent. Last week, same amount and term, 98.268 and 3.53 per cent.

Swiss Girl, German Stars Take Olympic Gold Medals

SAPPORO, Japan (CP) — The Canadian women Alpine skiers had just been wiped out on the downhill slopes of Mount Eniwa Saturday when word came through that figure skater Karen Magnussen of Vancouver had rallied in the school figures and was in a solid position for a medal.

Chef de mission Frank Shaughnessy of Montreal has been saying right along that the 19-year-old North American champion is Canada's "only real hope for a medal" in these Winter Games.

From the looks of things after six events and two days of competition he may be right.

Canada has nary a point, let alone a medal. But Miss Magnussen's efforts in the compulsory school figures, completed Saturday, left her in a strong position for at least a bronze medal, and possibly silver or gold.

Among the best freestyle skaters in the world, the Canadian girl had the luck of the draw with her after she finished third in the compulsory figures —six of them. She drew No. 18 starting position in the freestyle windup scheduled Monday.

That means she will be able to watch the performances of her challengers before going on the ice and tailoring her own performance accordingly. There are 19 girls in the event.

In the women's downhill, a chubby 17-year-old Swiss girl, Marie Therese Nadig, won the gold medal and 20-year-old Sue Corrock gave the United States its first Olympic downhill medal ever by taking the bronze.

Between them, winning the silver, came the heavily-favored Annemarie Proell of Austria, the 1971 World Cup champion, still nursing the effects of a bad cold.

"I still can't believe I won a gold medal," the excited Miss Nadig said as she was mobbed by team-mates. Her winning time for the 1¼-mile course was one minute 36.68 seconds.

TOPS CANADIANS

It was Carolyne Oughton of Calgary who posted the best Canadian time—1:40.92—and tied for 18th place. Laurie Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., finished 20th in the 45-girl field, her sister Kathy was 33rd. Judy Crawford of Toronto wound up 27th.

Both sides of divided Germany scored heavily in the competition Saturday, West Germans winning gold medals in the two-man bobsled and 500-metre men's speedskating while East Germany captured the prized Nordic combined championship.

Outside of Miss Magnussen's performance, the best individual Canadian showing so far has been 15th by speed skater Kevin Sirois of Edmonton in the 5,000 metres.

GERMANS ARE 1-2

Under ideal conditions, Wolfgang Zimmerer and Peter Utzschneider won the two-man bobsled title with a total time of 4:57.07 for four runs—the last two Saturday. Horst Floth and Pepi Bader, silver winners in 1968, did it again for a one-two West German windup. Jean Wicki and Edy Hubacher of Switzerland were the bronze winners.

A crowd of 40,000 turned out in the big outdoor main rink to see Erhard Keller of West Germany win his second Olympic gold medal.

SECOND TRIUMPH

The 27-year-old dental student won the 500-metre sprint for the second straight time in 39.4 seconds, an Olympic record. Hasse Borjes of Sweden was second and Valeri Mouratov of Russia third. Keller said he will retire from active competition this year.

Keller came off two false starts to finish with a spurt in the last 100 metres that clipped 7-10ths of a second from the Olympic mark set by Dick McDermott of the U.S. in 1964. But it was outside his official world record of 38.3 and a pending mark of 38.0.

Gerard Cassan of Ottawa placed 29th and John Cassidy of Montreal 30th. Ard Schenk of The Netherlands, winner of the 5,000 metres Friday, slipped and wound up 34th.

YOUNGEST WINNER

Ulrich Wehling, a 19-year-old student from Halle in East Germany became the youngest skier to win the Nordic combined-ski jumping and cross-country racing — and his countryman Karl-Heinz Luck won the bronze. The silver went to Rauno Mietten of Finland.

Wehling's third-place finish in the 15-kilometre — 9.3-mile-cross-country race Saturday and a fourth placing in Friday's jumping gave him enough points to win.

The figure skating compulsories ended with world champion Beatrix Schuba of Austria holding a lead of more than 100 points as the nine judges gave her a perfect score of 9.0 in ordinals.

Miss Schuba amassed 1,247 points and said she didn't think runner-up Julie Holmes of the U.S., or anyone else could catch her. Miss Holmes had 20.5 ordinals and 1,128.5 points.

Miss Magnussen, seventh in the 1968 Olympics, held third place here with 20.0 ordinals and 1,105.7 points.

About Cold Train Trips, And a Tale of Big Steve

The topic was "train trips I have known," or, "hell, this isn't cold, I remember the time when":

Oh, sure, everybody's been around. Who doesn't know about trains, snow drifts, avalanches, six hours at 20 below without any heat, no food in the dining car, and the bar as dry as the conductor. "Keep that out of sight, buddy."

It was with the in-between Cougars of the post-war years that train travel was the vogue for hockey teams. (And many a tale could be told too, of fellows who missed the first section during the war years, but managed to grab on to the second and make the switchback at the next big town. Or how about guard duty at 40 below in Brandon?)

Hockey schedule makers were mean in that post-war era, too. For example there was the Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, and maybe Brandon, swing. The idea was to jump the CPR Dominion out of Vancouver and play four games, sometimes five, in six nights before heading home. The junior Cougars of today have an even more demanding schedule.

The Edmonton game was the real tester. The game would end about 10:10, and the CNR daily to Saskatoon left about 30. An extra 10-15 minutes grace could be obtained by boarding at the North Edmonton station.

It wasn't too bad for the players — the train would wait a few minutes; but for Joe reporter, it was file at North Edmonton, or wait until 5 a.m. in Saskatoon. Then dash for the station.

Now 5 a.m. in Saskatoon isn't 5 a.m. in Victoria. Not at 45 below and a gentle breeze stirring up the snowflakes.

And that's where I met him, on my way back to the private car of the Cougars which had been shunted to a siding.

His name was something like "Big Steve" (memory has dimmed some of the details) and he was striding down the middle of the track.

"Getting an early start," he said. "Have to be in Regina for the weekend."

Further inquiries revealed that this wasn't unusual for Big Steve. He was the district strong man, the Paul Bunyan of his time. He went about bare-armed and open-necked most of the winter, had a huge sled which he pulled himself, and often delivered groceries to those who were frozen in. He was the living legend in the area.

"Besides, he often walks to Watrous, just for the exercise," a trainman said.

It was several months later that we heard the news. A blizzard had blown up after Steve had left Saskatoon, and the going was heavy indeed.

It was late that night that he heard a whistle and saw the lights of a train behind him. So he stepped off the right of way to allow the train to pass. But Steve didn't realize it wasn't the regular train. It was a rotary snowplow, and he was buried under 12 feet of snow.

It was spring when they found him. A farmer who happened by saw Steve in a chunk of ice in the ditch.

The area immediately went into mourning, and his many friends decided to hold a wake. When they carried the coffin into the auditorium, rented for the purpose, the whisky bottles were broken open and the contents consumed, along with great lashings of food. Soon, there wasn't a dry palate anywhere.

The wake went on for a couple of days, and it was late the morning of the third day, when suddenly Steve let out a yelp, sat up in the coffin, and glanced around.

"What's going on," he demanded. "Aren't you carrying things a bit too far?"

Well, they called off the rest of the funeral proceedings, although Steve managed to get in on the last part of his own wake, and he soon was back on track on his daily walk to Watrous.

Now this happened many moons ago, long before Air Canada and CP-Air got involved in the airlift business. And when they were grounded by the air controllers this year, and all other traffic in central B.C. got bogged down, the subject came up:

Where is Steve now? He could get through if anybody could.

As Jim Tang is from Saskatchewan, I thought I'd ask him.

"Steve," he said. "Oh, he came out here a few years ago, but he's back in Saskatoon now.

'TOO MANY BUTTING IN' AUSTRIANS PLAN TO QUIT

SAPPORO, Japan (AP) — Threats of resignations by Austrian ski team leaders were made here Saturday night because of a "wax scandal" just before the women's downhill race in which the Austrian favorite, Annemarie Proell, won the second-place silver medal. Marie Therese Nadig of Switzerland won the gold medal in finishing first.

Dr. Karl Heinz Klee, president of the Austrian Ski Federation, Franz Hoppichler, chief coach, and Paul Kerber, women's coach, told Austrian reporters they planned to resign "because there are just too many people butting in."

They referred to the interference by employees of an Austrian ski manufacturer whose skis Miss Proell and another Austrian girl, Brigitte Totschnigg, are using.

Hoppichler revealed that the men grabbed the skis of the two girls, which had been waxed by Kerber, and took them over to the coach of the British team, Karl Kahr, who changed the wax.

"I don't want to say that this was the reason Annemarie lost the race," Hoppichler said, "but I am just getting tired of being treated like a little boy by people who have no business interfering with the work of our team.

"I plan to get out of my contract as coach of the team right after the Sapporo Games." Kerber said he would do the same thing.

Hawks Are Erasing North Star Hopes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Any notions Minnesota North Stars had of finishing in first place in the western division of the National Hockey League are rapidly being dispelled by Chicago Black Hawks.

Meanwhile, Montreal Canadiens, with the injury jinx still hovering about them, had to settle for a 2-2 tie with California Golden Seals on the West Coast.

Erupting for four goals in fewer than six minutes of the second period, the Black Hawks went on to a handy victory that widened their lead over the idle North Stars to 13 points.

Dave Balon and Bobby Schmautz were the snipers for the Canucks.

Dennis Hull started the scoring binge at 6:49 of the middle period and by the 13:32 mark the visitors had put the game out of reach. Bobby Hull banged home his 37th goal of the season during the outburst.

Yvan Cournoyer's two goals less than four minutes apart destroyed Seals' visions of victory after they held a 2-0 lead in the third period.

LAPOINTE HURT

Guy Lapointe, Montreal defenceman had to be taken to hospital for treatment after he was struck in the face by Stan Gilbertson's stick. Gilbertson was attempting to clear the puck during a Montreal power play when he caught Lapointe on the upswing and opened gash under his eye.

Lapointe was replaced by Serge Savard, who was playing his first game in more than a year.

HARPER UNDER KNIFE

The previous night in Los Angeles, Canadiens lost the services of defenceman Terry Harper. He underwent surgery Friday to repair tendons in his right hand which was gashed when he smashed into the glass.

Doctors said the one-hour operation was apparently successful, but there was no indication of how long it might take Harper to recover.

St. Louis Blues announced Friday they were returning forward Curt Bennet to Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League.

REFEREE AND WRITERS TOSSED OUT BY POLICE

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — An exhibition soccer match between River Plate of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Rio's Fluminense ended in a free-for-all fight. The referee expelled nine of the 22 players on the field, and the police later threw the referee and several sportswriters off the premises.

Fluminense was winning 2-0 when the melee began in the second half.

The Argentines had been playing very roughly, Brazilian reporters said. The game eventually degenerated into a fight.

Ballard Facing Fight for Stock

TORONTO (CP) — Reaction from Conn Smythe's family indicated today that a counter-offer for Maple Leaf Gardens may be made to a planned $7,546,350 purchase of Gardens stock by Harold E. Ballard.

Ballard announced Friday he plans the transactions which would give him 80 per cent of the stock in the company that owns the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey team of the National Hockey League.

Aided by the Toronto-Dominion Bank, Ballard made an offer to purchase 251,545 shares of Gardens stock from CDDS— TAN Investments Ltd.

His longtime friend and business associate, former Gardens president C. Stafford Smythe, who died Oct. 13, 1971, and T. D. Jeffries were partners in CDDS-TAN. Most of the stock held by Stafford Smythe, son of Conn, who built the Gardens in 1931, was in the name of that partnership.

Because Ballard is an executor of the Stafford Smythe estate, along with Jeffries and lawyer John Edison, approval of the purchase by the Supreme Court of Ontario is required.

There is a chance that a counter-proposal will be made by the Smythe family which would allow them to retain the shares.

INVOLVED IN DISPUTE

Ballard and Dr. Hugh Smythe, a brother of Stafford, were involved recently in a dispute over control of Gardens' stock. Ballard also was critical of Stafford Smythe's son Tom, general manager of the Toronto Marlboros hockey team in the Junior A Series of the Ontario Hockey Association.

"Harold Ballard has made an offer for the shares which the executors of my brother's estate have recommended be accepted," said Dr. Smythe. "However, it is not a fait accompli. If we want to put in a counter-proposal, we can because the matter has to be decided by the courts. . . . But in the interest of peace and harmony, the offer from Ballard could be accepted."

Russians Trim Finns

Russia, the No. 1 seed and defending Olympic gold medallist, upended Finland 9-3 while Czechoslovakia, the No. 2 seed, smashed Poland 14-1. Third-seeded Sweden downed the United States 5-1 in the first game of the day.

The best individual performance of the day was turned in by hard-shooting Vaclav Nedomansky of Czechoslovakia who fired six goals.

HARD CHECKING

The Poles, who got into the championship round by blanking West Germany 4-0 Friday, were simply no match for the hard forechecking Czechs.

Poland managed only 10 shots on goal, six of them in the second period and four in the third. Czechoslovakia meanwhile peppered the Polish netminder with 63 shots — 22 in the first period, 15 in the second and 26 in the third.

Sweden scored twice in the first and third periods in their win over the U.S. in a game which saw only two penalties called, both to the Americans in the first period.

The U.S. also had a pair of goals called back as the Finnish referee ruled both times that the Americans had a man in the goal crease.

Thommie Bergman, Inge Hammarstrom, Goren Nelsson, Thommy Abrahamsson and Tord Lundstrom scored for the winners while Kevin Ahearn managed the lone U.S. goal.

Hosts Find Success In Girls' Tourneys

Campbell River, Vancouver's Prince of Wales, Queen Elizabeth of Surrey and the host Reynolds team scored opening-round victories Friday in the inaugural Reynolds invitational girls' high school basketball tournament.

The hosts also turned up victorious in another eight-team invitational tournament at Belmont.

Reynolds got an 18-point effort from Janis Turner in climbing past Lake Cowichan, 57-43. And in Friday's other games, Queen Elizabeth defeated Mount View 35-22 while Prince of Wales edged Esquimalt 25-20.

At Belmont, Cathy Auburn dropped in 12 points to help the host girls to a 29-19 triumph over Semiahmoo. In the only other game played in the Belmont tournament Friday, North Delta tripped Gulf Islands, 26-19.

Play in both tournaments resumed this morning and will wind up with finals tonight.

Viking's Eliminated; Vikettes Move On

University of Victoria Vikettes suffered a frustrating start, then enjoyed a finer finish on their visit to Edmonton Friday.

Vikettes registered their 10th victory in 13 starts by defeating Alberta's Pandas 44-35 in a Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball game.

Vikings were eliminated from the men's playoffs when the front-running Alberta Golden Bears tripped the cold-shooting Victorians 59-47.

'BIRDS ON BEAM'

Elsewhere in the men's league, UBC Thunderbirds moved to within one victory of clinching the West Division's second playoff berth by overpowering Calgary Dinosaurs 81-71; Winnipeg Wesmen defeated Brandon Bobcats 82-74, and the Plains Division-leading Manitoba Bisons beat Regina Cougars 81-73.

In other women's games, UBC Thunerettes erupted for 40 points in the final half to whip Calgary's Dinnies 52-37 and a 20-point performance by Barbie Hall helped Manitoba to a 61-55 decision over Regina Cougettes.

Coach Gary Taylor's Vikings dropped eight points behind second-place UBC and have only three games remaining.

Vikings hit on only 29 per cent of their shots while the Golden Bears were good on 36 per cent. Vikings started strongly enough, jumping into a 18-15 lead at one stage, then ran into grief when Alberta forced Victoria to shoot from the outside.

VIKETTES (44) — Mary Clarkson, Laury Atkinson, Rose Jossul 10, Yvonne Letellier 4, Gail Carlson 4, Judy Pearson, Pam Henson 8, Eva Van Wouw, Dierdre Ogden 7, Lorna McHattie 11.

PANDAS (35) — Judy Fairburn, Connie Saunders 4, Wendy Martin 17, Bev Schalin 4, Sharon Worden, Dixie Dow, Kathy Moore, Jane Templeton, Mary Hawkey 9, Pat McClure 1.

MORE SPORT ON PAGE 19

Bob Morris and Mike Fyrisby sparked the Bears with 13 points apiece. Tom Holmes, with 17, and Gord Hoshal, with 16, were Victoria's most effective players.

The flight out of Victoria had to be delayed when manager Lydia Gledhill discovered the team uniforms were locked in the trunk of a car at the airport.

In Edmonton, Victoria coach Mike Gallo allowed his squad to roam freely until 4 p.m. At 3, however, he discovered the game's start had moved ahead two hours — to 4 p.m. Scrambling madly through downtown Edmonton, Gallo manated to round up seven players by game time.

Despite poor shooting in the first half, Vikettes came up with a 20-16 half-time lead.

Lorna McHattie, with 11 points; Rose Jossul, with 10; Pam Henson, with 8, and Dierdre Ogden, with seven, carried the brunt of Victoria's attack.

MURRAY KENNETT
. . . Cougar leader

Kennett Comes on Solid As Pressure Evaporates

Murray Kennett no longer senses pressure, and that may be the reason the Victoria Cougar defenceman stands up as one of coach Fred Hucul's "dependables."

The 19-year-old team captain has been a consistent standout for the past six weeks of the Western Canada Hockey League campaign.

Kept off skates earlier this week because of a touch of tonsilitis, Kennett resumed workouts Friday and promises to be back at his defensive stand when the Cougars end a 10-day layoff by meeting Medicine Hat Tigers at Memorial Arena tonight (8:30).

With his strong efforts, Kennett has drawn attention, the likes of which he hasn't experienced since the 1968-69 season, when as a 15-year-old, he came out of Esquimalt minor ranks surrounded by promising predictions.

Now he's starting to live up to the touts of 1968-9.

"I haven't changed my style," he said following Friday's workout, "but I can tell you that I never fel any pressure playing for Hucul. There was a lot of it in my first three years of junior hockey.

"Also, I'm playing with a different bunch of guys. In other years, I'd drop a pass and there would be nobody there to take it. This year, the guys are in the right places . . ."

While goaltender Darryl Fedorak has been considered Cougars' most prominent draft choice, Hucul says he will "be surprised" if a pro team does not claim Kennett in the annual grab of graduating juniors.

"He's not aggressive, but not afraid," said Hucul, "and that's why I think he may be drafted. Too many pro teams are loaded with those so-called aggressive players. You can't always depend on them, that's why scouts are starting to look for the steady, heady and dependable types . . . like Kennett.

PLAYERS ALSO TEACH

"Everybody says a coach has to teach his players everything, but I operate on a theory that players must also teach their coach. Kennett was the first on the team to recognize this.

"In a recent game, one of my players was lining up in the wrong position. Before I could do anything, Murray, who was on the ice at the time, quickly went over and got his teammate to move to the proper spot.

"He knew what I wanted."

★ ★ ★

ICE CHIPS: Forward Tim Struch, Cougars' only other casualty during the recent layoff, also resumed skating Friday after undergoing treatment for a knee injury . . . He'll probably remain on the sidelines tonight since Hucul "probably" will go with the same lineup that has produced 30 goals in Victoria's last four games . . . Gary Donaldson continues to top the team in scoring with 48 points . . .

TIGERS DO HAVE FUN ON WESTMINSTER ICE

(Times News Services)

Medicine Hat Tigers "like" New Westminster's ice but may reserve judgment on the Victoria freeze until after tonights' Western Canada Hockey League engagement with the Cougars in Memorial Arena.

The Tigers, carving up Westminster 7-3 Friday, have posted victories in all three of their appearances in Queen's Park Arena this season. But the league's highest-scoring team hasn't been quite as successful in Memorial Arena.

The Tigers have split the spoils in their first two Victoria appearances — winning 7-3 and then losing 4-3 — and go for the "rubber" tonight.

GOALIE HURT

Definitely, New Westminister is more fun. In embarrassing the Bruins Friday, the Tigers dealt Westminster its first home-ice loss since Nov. 17 — when the 'Hatters last showed up in the Royal City.

It was the Bruins' third straight setback after running off a string of 17 victories.

In addition to the scoreboard battle, the Bruins also lost goalie Terry Richardson. The Bruins' netminder lost some front teeth after being elbowed by Medicine Hat's Bob Gassoff at 7:58 of the second period.

Gassoff drew a major for the incident, then tangled with Bruins' Don Martineau and drew an additional major, minor and misconduct.

Doug Sauter replaced Richardson for the rest of the game.

TIGERS IN CHARGE

The free-wheeling Tiger forwards were clearly in command. They peppered 59 shots at the Westminster goal while Tigers' Leo Karchie stopped only 20.

Elsewhere in the league, Regina Pats and Saskatoon Blades continued their fight for top place in the Eastern Division. Regina defeated third-place Brandon Wheat Kings 7-3 while the Blades kept pace with an 8-1 decision over Flin Flon Bombers.

In Winnipeg, the Jets snapped a five-game skid by tripping Vancouver Nats 7-3 before 7,531 fans.

At Westminster, Jeff Ablett became Tigers' second 40-goal scorer by counting three times. The "hat" gave him 42 for the season, two more than Stan Weir. Derek Kuntz also moved to the 40-goal level by connecting twice — his 35th and 36th scoring shots.

New Westminster goal-getters were Grant Williams, Bob Stumpf and Lorne Henning.

World Mark In Hurdles

TORONTO (CP) — Patty Johnson of the Angeles Track Club in San Clemente, Calif., won the women's 50-yard hurdles with a world record indoor time of 6.4 seconds Friday night at the Toronto Star Maple Leaf indoor games.

The previous record of 6.5 was set by Chi Cheng, then a resident of China, at the 1970 indoor games here.

Hockey Playoff Starts on Sunday

Saanich Braves will clash with Fullers Lake at 11:15 a.m. Sunday at George Pearkes Arena in the opening game of a best-of-three, Lower Vancouver Island Hockey Association midget division playoff.

Braves finished the league schedule in second place while Fullers Lake took the fourth spot.

Top Stars Avoid Upsets To Gain Shuttle Finals

Some of the lesser seeds suffered upset reversals Friday, but the top-ranked stars advanced to finals in all events at the Victoria and District badminton championships.

Defending champion Liz-Anne Ogden (ladies' singles) Bob Lewis (men's singles), Maureen Hibberson and Jean Wescott (ladies' doubles), Lewis and Grant Hazlewood (men's doubles) and the Hazelwood-Mrs. Hibberson partnership (mixed) were the top-seeded players who advanced to tonight's finals at the Racquet Club.

Finals get under way at 7.

Miss Ogden eliminated Mrs. Wescott 11-8, 11-3 Friday to advance against second-seeded Diana Rogers, who scored an 11-3, 11-2 victory over Racquet clubmate Sue Gower.

Lewis downed Esquimalt's Mike Wagner, 15-9, 17-16, to move against No. 2 seed Dave Howells, who sidelined John Meija of Cordova Bay 15-8, 15-13.

DIANA ROGERS
. . . single final

Mrs. Hibberson and Mrs. Wescott scored a hard-fought 3-15, 15-7, 15-5 victory over Wendy Cuppage and Anne Currie in women's doubles semi-final play to move against Muriel Knott and Pat Kirk.

The mother-daughter combination from Brentwood, third-seeded Mrs. Knott and Mrs. Kirk upset second-rated Lyn Polson and Miss Ogden 15-12, 18-14.

Lewis and Hazelwood downed Wagner and Ross Woodland 15-8, 15-6 while second-seeded Ed Hedley and Eric Hibberson topped Meija and Warren Sweeney 18-17, 14-15, 13-9 in men's doubles semi-finals.

Hazelwood and Mrs. Hibberson defeated Mrs. Knott and Martin Woods 8-15, 15-10, 15-12 in one mixed semi-final. Their rivals will be Lewis and Miss Polson, the Cordova Bay pairing which defeated Anne Currie and Howells 15-10, 15-12.

League Asked To Observe Rules

CALGARY (CP) — The World Hockey Association was asked today to follow Canadian Amateur Hockey Association regulations when the proposed league holds its draft next week.

In a letter to WHA president Joe Davidson, the CAHA said: "We are confident that you and your member clubs are aware . . . that junior hockey . . . is professional hockey's greatest single source of talent, and any steps taken by your organization to disturb or destroy this structure would be disastrous, not only to professional but to amateur hockey as well."

The letter was sent by CAHA president Joe Kryczka of Calgary, asked the WHA not to take any steps "to draft, entice or otherwise encourage the defection to professional ranks of amateurs eligible to play under CAHA regulations during the 1972-73 season."

Kryczka said the CAHA will "take all necessary steps," including government intervention, if the WHA goes against the rules.

Totems' Upset Triumph Spoils Bays' Honor Climb

Victoria High Totems may have killed Oak Bay's chances of cracking the British Columbia high school boys' basketball "honor roll."

No thanks, says Oak Bay, to the Totems' 28-27 upset victory over the the Bays on Friday.

Previously undefeated in the Victoria Senior Boys' League, the Bays had been threatening to crack the top 10 list in a poll conducted by B.C. coaches.

The Bays drew "honorable mention" in the latest poll while Belmont Braves, the Victoria league's co-leaders (with Reynolds Roadrunners) remained the only Vancouver Island team to be ranked.

The Braves were seventh-ranked provincially, behind, in order: North Delta, Burnaby South, Vancouver Centennial, Mennonite Educational Institute, Winston Churchill and John Oliver.

In addition to Townsend, Steve Rothwell (8), Jim Griffin (6), Sean Flynn (6) and John Hampton (6) were the only Totems to score against the defensive-minded Bays.

Tellier Quartet To Legion Final

A Trafalgar Branch entry skipped by Maurice Tellier will represent the South Vancouver Island zone in the Royal Canadian Legion's provincial curling final.

The Tellier foursome, which includes John Innes, Ivan Wood and Jim Coffey, defeated Dr. Kirby Moysey's rink in the zone final to advance to the B.C. playoff in Penticton Feb. 25-27.

A Dynasty Trapped but Inspired by Tradition

By GEORGE WOODCOCK

Perhaps the key sentences in Edward Crankshaw's excellent history of Europe's most durable (and therefore most adaptable) ruling family, are the final ones: "The last Habsburg, Charles, stepped down from his throne in November 1918, fully 642 years since the first Rudolph had set up his standard in Vienna. The people were set free, all too soon to be swallowed up by the new successors to the Habsburgs, tyrants more cruel and absolute than the old Europe had ever known."

Here Crankshaw reveals more about himself than he does about his subjects (if one can rightly refer to the Habsburgs as subjects even in this tangential use of the word, for no dynasty was more conscious of hierarchical separation from ordinary humanity.) He reveals a hatred and a contempt for totalitarian rulers that is undoubtedly in great measure due to his knowledge of Russia in the Stalinist era and to his understanding of a former subject (in the literal sense) of the Habsburgs, Adolf Hitler.

The rise of Hitler, and Stalin's climb to power over a mountain of his comrade's bodies, were among the consequences of the destruction of the three great 19th century European empires, those of the Hohenzollerns, the Romanovs and the Habsburgs. This was the end to which all the realism and rhetoric of the French Revolution and of the revolutions of 1848 and 1917-18 had led. Men had ceased to be subjects to imperial families; they had become slaves to ideologies. They had exchanged the rule of human beings for the tyranny of abstractions.

This, I suggest, is the scenario, the basic view of European history, that has inspired not only the book under review but also Edward Crankshaw's earlier works on the same dynasty, Vienna: The Image of a Culture in Decline, The Fall of the House of Habsburg, and Maria Theresa.

Note the titles of the first two of these earlier books: Decline and Fall are the key words, and there is no doubt that Crankshaw's rather complex attitude towards the Habsburgs is in part inspired by the melancholy pleasure we gain from looking at crumbling ruins or from considering like Shelley the Utopian future when faiths and empires gleam like wrecks in a dissolving dream.

But there is more to it than sentimental fatalism. Crankshaw is clearly attracted to the Habsburgs, with their ambitions, and their heavy chins, and their sense of a growing distance from the rest of mankind, and the fortune that enabled them to grasp, briefly and insecurely, half the known world of their time when their soldiers destroyed the ancient empires of the Americas.

And the real question, the fascinating aspect of his book, is why a cultured and shrewd man of the later 20th century, with a wide and constantly renewed knowledge of the contemporary political life of Europe, and a special intimacy with central and eastern Europe, should feel such an attraction. What, in fact, about the Habsburgs and their empire, so fascinated him?

For there were, after all, more brilliant people even among the ministers of the Habsburgs — Metternich among them. And though at least one member of the family was a good musician and others were patrons of Gluck and Haydn and Mozart, there were many more sensitive minds at large in their world.

Their pendulum swing constantly from success back to failure. Upstarts like Frederick the Great and Napoleon and Bismarck defeated them.

In 1918, when the moment of truth came for all the great continental empires, they faded out like ghosts at dawn. Yet one has to grant an appeal to the Habsburgs, something that sets them off from other dynasties, and it is not merely the allure of Johann Strauss' Vienna, for it attaches equally to that expansive Renaissance prince, Maximilian I, and to that dour monarch, Philip II of Spain, presiding over that dark world of tortured Iberian pieties which El Greco portrayed.

Perhaps what draws one is really a sense that, by and large, the Habsburgs more than any other of the great dynasties were inspired and elevated by the role they assumed, with its mystical and idealistic connotations.

The title of Holy Roman Emperor, which they first secured in the middle ages, was in practical terms a rather hollow one, for often the Emperor was poorer and militarily less powerful than most of his vassal monarchs, but at least it conveyed a vision of a universal and holy monarchy, a world ideally at peace and governed by a single loyalty and a single social and political ethic.

It is true that under Philip II the same belief produced a religious intolerance of a pernicious kind, but even here one cannot avoid the fact that Philip consistently endured the rigours implicit in his own system of life.

And, whatever may have been the failings of Franz Joseph's bizarre 19th century empire, which united Austrians and Hungarians, Czechs and Slovaks,

CRANKSHAW
. . . an attraction

Croats and Bosnians and even a few remaining Italians in Trieste, the fact remains that the last of the great Habsburg rulers did envisage a polity that transcended racial and national barriers.

And, as Crankshaw points out, he ruled it in a manner which, when one compares it with what has since happened in so much of the same region, was bland and humane.

I am sure the lesson to gain from Crankshaw's book is not that we must go back, for change — which is not always progress — has made that impossible.

On the other hand, what he does suggest — and this has a vital lesson for men in our age — is that local loyalties are meaningful only when we combine them with universal loyalties: that the particular love we may feel for the place where we have been born and have lived can blossom fully only when it recognizes the validity of other such loves.

Nationalism, because it is exclusive, fails on this count, and if there is nothing else we may learn from the record of the Habsburgs, at least let us not forget their virtue of inclusiveness.

In the meantime their story, as Crankshaw tells it, is a fascinating record of men and women trapped in their own traditions and yet inspired by them. It is all the more fascinating because what the Habsburgs did and neglected to do is to a great extent the prelude to the world we know today. Sarajevo, after all, began, if it did not end, as a Habsburg incident.

The Meaning . . . . . Is the Message

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

Emerson called language "fossil poetry." Paul Goodman, a modern Emerson in breadth of interest and missionary zeal, makes these bones live in his new book.

SPEAKING AND LANGUAGE: Defence of Poetry, by Paul Goodman. Random House. $8.25.

Speaking and Language emphasizes speaking as a creative activity, not language as a code. "Meaning" is more than the raisins in the bread; it's the whole loaf — speaker and hearer making sense to each other in the context of their situation.

Communications experts, including many linguists, slice things rather thin in trying to crumble out the ingredients. Goodman believes that today's mechanistic theories have obscured the process, or failed to recognize that any process is involved at all.

Poetry works, the book suggests, because it does systematically what all speech does fitfully. It encourages the receiver to fill in, to stretch his assumptions of what the forms of language can do. Communication is two-way creation.

The "code" exists as recognizable patterns in speech, but expressiveness usually demands that they be modified. Variations that are useful in enough contexts become part of the common store. Absolute conformity (the rite words in rote order) is hard to find and not worth looking for. It may signal only that the speaker has nothing to say.

As usual, Goodman has much to say and says it well.

He draws from a remarkable fund of experience: as a Gestalt psychotherapist, a playwright, a novelist, a poet. He has shaped language, just as he has labored to shape society, with high seriousness over the past 30 years.

Growing Up Absurd is echoed in his comments on the debasing effects of "format" — the distortion imposed by external forces on many language transactions. TIMEstyle, 26-minute situation comedies, and ritualized political press conferences? No wonder some people grow to distrust going-through-channels. The wonder and pity is that most people do not. They slide into passive acceptance instead.

Goodman is down on the mechanical and administrative solutions proposed for the Great Illiteracy Crisis. He relates them to the same old problem: compulsory miseducation.

Let students find out that reading and writing matter in their lives now, he says, not merely as preparation for wage-slavery. Cultivate in these arts the insight and imagination that gleam in children's early speech. Officious attempts to "help them walk before they can fly" might ground them forever.

Human beings cannot bear too much truth, and dogmatism cannot bear too much Goodman. He makes sense. Such men are dangerous, bless them.

Men at Odds With the World

By ANTHONY JENKINS

John Wain's latest collection of short stories is deceptively low-keyed. He resists the tricksy ending; his narratives move straightforwardly and his style is economic. Yet one is often surprised by a fortuitous phrase, and the stories accumulate into a trenchant statement about man at odds with his surroundings.

THE LIFEGUARD, by John Wain. Macmillan. $6.25.

Not everything succeeds. A story about a man who runs over a badger on a country road at night is too flimsy, however symbolic the intention behind it. Another, about a tractor-driver, seems designed especially for Playboy (where it was first published) in the way it suggests that the man's triumph in his work leads to thoughts of triumph in bed.

Wain ranges widely for his subject-matter: from teenage bobbysoxers to a fading musical comedy star, and the editors and book critics in the pubs of Fleet Street. These diverse characters all speak with Wain's voice and intelligence, but he brings fresh insight to their worlds.

He ranges widely in mood, too. The title story is perceived through an intense lad who is desperate to succeed in the job that will keep him in his hometown. Another is a sprightly little piece about a girl from the North who finds herself modelling for an eccentric action-painter.

In fact, Wain has most to say when he is dealing with London and the fringes of the Arts.

His final story, a long one called "A Man in a Million", is particularly good: a sardonic glance at the trendy columnists and failed hangers-on of Fleet Street. He pulls the whole thing together by the image of the sand-hopper who sinks into the sand when you try to catch him. Around this metaphor he groups his assorted characters and the fads that they pursue.

Wain's cool prose slashes out at the socially pretentious, like the Unisex suit from "one of those expensive tailors who specialize in making expensive copies of cheap fashions." At the end of the book, it is this well-tuned wit that lingers on in the mind.

Peeping Tom

It used to be "something nasty" that happened in the woodshed. In the shed at the bottom of this particular Canterbury garden, two "children" in their early teens explore each other sexually. Soon they are making love under the spying eyes of Kelvin, an 18-year-old who fancies both of them.

Despite the fact that no one finds out about the shed, the children fall foul of their parents and schoolteachers who think they are seeing too much of each other or who complain about the deterioration in their schoolwork. They cut themselves off from their school friends and they are not popular with their elder siblings either.

Faced with misunderstanding, this schoolboy Romeo and Juliet (actually Tristram and Jenny) cling to each other all the harder and Kelvin, who had started out as a voyeur, begins to feel like their protecting God.

Presumably to avoid sentimentality, William Bloom has chosen to tell the story through Kelvin. The trouble with this is that one sees little of the children's love except their struggles in the shed, so that one is not convinced of the beauty and innocence of their love (as the author obviously is), and one is left with the feeling of having been a Peeping Tom. — A. Web of Time

Sarah Gainham's characters are peculiarly vulnerable to their past lives. Their present identities are conditioned by their memories and by the hurts that have befallen them. Private Worlds, the final novel in her trilogy about Vienna in the last war and after, is perfectly suited to her talents.

PRIVATE WORLDS, by Sarah Gainham. McGraw-Hill. $6.95.

Miss Gainham moves her characters slowly through a tangled web of time. The action takes place mainly in the minds as they struggle with the past in order to cope with the present. A sensitive and stimulating novel, it is a book to be lingered over. Fortunately it begins with a full synopsis of the story that started with Night Falls on the City, so that it can be enjoyed by anyone discovering Miss Gainham's world for the first time. — A. J.

DEAD LEAFS

By DON VIPOND

For openers, let's admit that some of us who are relatively rational otherwise are fanatic hockey viewers and a wretched several thousand of us rise and fall with the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Just leave it to the shrinks why that should be.

That said, it's time to add the only remarkable aspect of this book is the nerve of its creators and publisher.

To suggest it is The Toronto Hockey Story takes nerve indeed. In fact it offers a pedestrian text, insultingly incomplete but mercifully short, and a collection of badly displayed black and white photos, a full half of which would end up in any competent photo editor's wastebasket.

Fischler appears to have zipped through a few old news clips to collect a handful of names from the rich past of the Leafs. While he has managed to avoid bringing even one of them to life, he was able to resurrrect most of the cliches.

Baliotti, described as the official NHL photographer, appears to have found a place for a lot of pictures he must have been wondering what to do with.

Or could it be that both of them hurried through the motions to take advantage of a surging market in sports books?

The Saloon Saga Of Gassy Jack

By TORCHY ANDERSON

At a time when Vancouver's old hootin' tootin' Gastown is in the news, police and otherwise, it is fitting that comparative newcomers should have gathered in this slim volume a vivid and concise basis of fact from which legends, sometime distorted, have sprung. The old timers seldom bother to write it down.

GASTOWN'S GASSY JACK, by Raymond Hull and Olga Ruskin. Soules Publications, Vancouver. $1.50.

In style and length this essay follows the example of the B.C. Railway Historical Association with such splendid contributions as The Cordwood Limited, Shays and Switchbacks. Several early-settled districts, too, have produced local histories that are highly readable and exceedingly valuable — the very roots of our history.

John Deighton, who was to pass into B.C. history as Gassy Jack, was born in Hull, Yorkshire, in 1830. At that date the vast territory that included the present British Columbia was known as New Caledonia. Jack went to sea at 14, saw the coast of western American in the California gold rush, followed the gold fever to New Caledonia and eventually got into steamboating on the Fraser River. Steamboating was cleaner work than gold digging — and the pay was regular.

Ashore he tried for a job as a lighthouse keeper — no success—and got into the saloon business with a keg of whisky and a ready tongue. That was long before astute politicians went into the liquor business in the interests of the dear people whom they did not want to enjoy their drinking.

Gassy Jack followed a simple policy: he flew the Union Jack at the slighest excuse and was the solace of the tired, dry lumberjack and the sawdust-covered mill worker.

Your reviewer suggests that, given a leisure hour on a sunny day, you buy this little book, settle into a chair in new Gastown with a modern, reduced "pint" and remember you are near the spot once thus advertised:

"J. DEIGHTON BEGS TO INFORM HIS FRIENDS AND THE PUBLIC THAT HE HAS A CHOICE STOCK OF LIQUORS IMPORTED DIRECT FROM THE "LADY LAMPSON" AND "MEDORA" WHICH HE WILL SELL AT MODERATE PRICES."

A Fairyland That Feeds Real Life

By JOHN EZARD

All manner of goodies were showered on the hobbit man on his eightieth birthday last month. As a person who relishes ceremony and esteems rank, he must above all have enjoyed the prospect of receiving his CBE from the Queen at Buckingham Palace — which, though no longer noted for feasting and singing, is the nearest equivalent to the castle of Gondor in this fallen age of Middle Earth.

New readers, pause here. It's a fair bet that about a third of you have never heard of Professor J. R. R. Tolkien, let alone managed to decode my first paragraph.

Another third, who have, will read to the end with the reverence of medieval acolytes. The remaining third, who detest the man and all his works, will already be chewing the carpet. Tolkien gets people like that.

For the benefit of the first third, he has been — since the mid-1960s — established as the best-selling Oxford story teller since Lewis Carroll. By now, it is safe to add that the author of "Hobbit" and "Lord of the Rings" will stand as the most popular twentieth century writer of epics and fairy stories.

It is becoming plausible to compare his world sales with those of Ian Fleming, Harold Robbins, and Denis Wheatley. This is a little unusual for an Oxford Emeritus Professor in Anglo-Saxon who sells mainly in paperback and has never described a rape, a shooting, or a Black Mass in his life.

Is he any good? Well, I won't try to summarise the plot of the 1,500-page Ring trilogy, except to say that it creates an entire and coherent world. But read this: "There was a village once, not very long ago for those with long memories nor very far away for those with long legs."

If it makes no impact, stop reading now. You are immune to the genre. That is one of the most characteristic and functionally perfect introductions to a fairy tale written in their long history. It opens Tolkien's 1967 story "Smith of Wootton Major."

Unlike the Ring trilogy, Smith has not started psychedelic campus cults in America nor sold accelerating millions of copies in 13 languages. But it does encapsulate in 57 pages most of the qualities which have enabled the professor not merely to restore but to reinvent the fairy tale for our time.

Wootton Major, so called to distinguish it from Wootton Minor, "a few miles away deep in the trees," is a village which exists unknowingly at a point of intersection between the ordinary and supernatural worlds. In each generation, a fairy king secretly confers on one child a 24-year visitor's passport to his kingdom. With Smith, the chosen child of this tale, the passport is a small silver star swallowed in a cake at a feast.

Each successive mortal child is befriended and awed by the same undying king and queen. On one visit, Smith meets a birch tree which talks and whose branches weep when a strange gale strips its leaves. On another, he stumbles on the Vale of Evermorn "where the air is so lucid that eyes can see the red tongues of birds as they sing in the trees on the far side of the valley, although that is very wide and the birds are no greater than wrens."

The author being Tolkien, the menu of the feast itself is described in detail and with passion. When I helped interview him in Oxford for a television film shown last month, the BBC lunched us handsomely at the Eastgate Tavern. While our host was in the lavatory, the professor murmured to me: "You know, I do like perks."

And so many of the details which give his inventions their muscular foothold in reality come from tastes like that — not only fondness for perks and abundant food but his known, hobbitish regard for tobacco, pipes, male friendship, families, streams, genealogies, and tree roots.

In other ways, he is a canny man who knows how to hide and husband his creative resources. It will be difficult to write a meaningful biography of him, which is sad for everyone except him.

We have a few scraps. We know that the Shire, the heartland of the Hobbit and the Ring books, is a memory of Sarehole, near Birmingham, the long destroyed village where he was happy until orphaned at the age of 12.

We also know that his talent for devising languages like Elvish warmed a solitary, frightened adolescence; that the germ of almost everything he later wrote began in his notebooks or mind during this period; that the Dead Marshes, where phantom corpses float in the trilogy, are the craters of the Somme; and that, having been invalided out of the Army, he was rescued from the cold by the most fortunate of marriages to a fellow-orphan, followed by success at Oxford, where his son John now lectures.

His work, indeed, is a singlehanded justification for the language-based Oxford approach to English studies. Only the older English languages, with their channels to the pre-literate European and Icelandic imagination, could have yielded the material for the synthesis he contrived in "Lord of the Rings," in which reflections of Wagnerian myth co-exist harmoniously with elements of Celtic legend.

Although, as one reader, I don't believe in fairies, I do value the tender part of the human mind which needs to create them. Tolkien's output can be taken, even at the barest analysis as an extended metaphor for the pact of friendship which needs to be struck between our considerable imagination and our constricted sensory experience. Tolkien's fairyland never leeches the satisfactions from ordinary life. For his characters, it feeds every fibre of that life.

When Smith, as an adult, returns home after his last visit, he has voluntarily surrendered his passport to the next generation but still wears the star in his hair as a keepsake: "When he crossed the threshold, the star dimmed again," Tolkien says, "but Nell took him by the hand and led him to the hearth and there she turned and looked at him. 'Dear man,' she said, 'Where have you been and what have you seen? There is a flower in your hair.' "

TOLKIEN
. . . star in hair

Dear man, enjoy your CBE, but not for too long. You are supposed to be writing a companion volume to the Ring saga called "The Simarillion." More than a third of the people who have read this far would like it as soon as you can manage.

A Worthy Cause Is Not Enough

The Capricci Gallery has advertised an exhibition of three originals by Henri Rousseau, Picasso and Henri Toulouse-Lautrec. To view these works, an admission fee of $1 is being charged, proceeds to the George Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children.

The Picasso is not an original work and initially there was doubt about the other two.

Misled by an incorrect date of 1895 given me by the Capricci Gallery owner, Mrs. Tita Hong, I could not see how Rousseau painted the exhibited work, uncharacteristic of his style, at a time when he was 51 years old and at the height of his maturity.

Mrs. Hong was challenged with my doubts and she telephoned the local owner of the Rousseau and learned a more realistic date, 1868. This was 11 years before Rousseau had begun to paint seriously, while he was still a Sunday painter, at a time when Rousseau was between wars. He had served in Mexico from 1861 to 1867 and left for the Franco-Prussian War in 1870.

The painting is not mature Rousseau and bears little relation to the body of historically significant work achieved later in his life. Pastoral and light-hearted, it is still a competent painting, but without the personality and conviction he later developed. The name Rousseau calls forth more glory than this early painting is capable of inspiring.

Due to the relative insignificance of this work, I feel that the insurance figure of one half million dollars quoted by Mrs. Hong misrepresents the value of the painting.

The Picasso is not an original work; it is a reproduction. The original gouache done in the 1920s is not on the Capricci wall and a dollar must be paid to see a commercial silk-screen on which I would place a low value. Picasso made no silkscreens in the 1920s. The reproduction is undoubtedly authorized by Picasso and he must share royalties, but it is not hand-signed or valuable.

Mrs. Hong and the anonymous owner of the Picasso were surprised by my conclusion, substantiated by another expert, that the Picasso was nearly valueless.

My disbelief in the Picasso and early doubts about the Rousseau overshadowed the Lautrec and at first I was suspicious. The print was small and Lautrec customarily made large prints. There was a woven fabric texture in the printer's ink, uncharacteristic of the planographic method used by Lautrec and indicative that this too was a silk-screen, thus a reproduction; Lautrec did not use silk-screen.

Investigation showed however that Lautrec occasionally made small lithos for restaurant menu covers, on heavy woven grain paper. Since the creased and abused print depicted a cafe singer, my doubts disappeared.

Mrs. Hong assured me that the Capricci promotion was not a commercial venture and that she assured the board of the Pearkes Clinic in "black and white" that she was taking no salary or overhead from the receipts and she was prepared to accept a deficit if the promotion lost money.

Aside from publicity, the only financial gain possible for the gallery is from the sale of works by relatively unknown artists whose names were advertised underneath the three famous artists. The work of these other artists is of little consequence; most of it is sentimental, slickly seductive and in bad taste. These are paintings whose only fine art value is that they are indeed original oils.

★ ★ ★

The City has allowed Mrs. Hong to open Sundays to compensate for shortened business hours. Her early 4:30 p.m. closing time is necessary because the valuable Rousseau must be put in a time-locked vault, the use of which has been donated by the Bank of Commerce.

On Feb. 26 in the Empress Hotel Crystal Ballroom, the Capricci gallery will sponsor a dinner dance and auction of paintings, proceeds again for the George R. Pearkes Clinic.

Paintings to be auctioned have been donated to the clinic by local artists and artists on the mainland. These artists will preside at the head table of the $10-a-plate dinner. Their work is at present enjoying an advanced display in a corner of the Capricci showroom.

A water color by Brian Travers-Smith will go to the block with a minimum bid of $300. A piece of idealist genre by Jose Trinidad inspired an advance offer of $1,500; reserve bids however were not being taken. There is an unpretentious collage by Sam Black of Vancouver and a fish boat scene by Albertan H. Hiene. Other paintings are worth no mention. Fenwick Landsdowne had yet to submit his contribution.

The G. R. Pearkes Clinic will benefit from the Lautrec, Rousseau exhibition and from the auction-dinner-dance. My concern however is that the art values not be overshadowed by a worthy cause. Art too is important.

HMS Pinafore

In collaboration with Queen Maragaret's School for Girls, Duncan, Brentwood College is staging full performances of Gilbert and Sullivan's HMS Pinafore and the curtain-raiser Trial By Jury this month.

Under the direction of J. L. Queen, the performances will take place at Brentwood College, Feb. 14-17. Ticket reservations may be made by phoning 743-5521.

Music Festival Scholarships

Two new scholarships have been announced for Victoria Music Festival participants.

Valued at $125 each, they will be awarded annually by Victoria Symphony Society through the Symphony Foundation in each of two categories — strings and brass, woodwind or percussion.

The scholarships will be open to students already playing in the orchestra and to any others who have reached a standard of competence making them eligible to do so.

Competitors must perform at the Music Festival each year and be adjudicated by a panel comprised of the following: Festival strings and band adjudicators and one other person delegated by the music director of the symphony.

As the Festival syllabus had gone to press before the announcement was made, further particulars of the scholarships may be obtained at Victoria Symphony office, 1960 Lansdowne Road, 592-2449, or Western Music, 1108 Blanshard.

'BELGIAN PANORAMA'

A traveller's delight and an historian's dream — that is how many people have described the little nation of Belgium.

In Belgian Panorama, narrator-producer Doug Jones has created a color travel film that looks at Belgium from the beginning of the Middle Ages into tomorrow.

As one of the World Adventure Tours film series, it will be shown at McPherson Playhouse twice, at 6 and 8:30 p.m., Friday.

Highlights of the film include the famed begonia festival, the Val St. Lambert crystal factory, the great cathedral at Antwerp and the battlefields of Waterloo and Flanders.

Reaney Play Staged

WINNIPEG (CP) — The professional world premiere of James Reaney's play, The Sun and The Moon, begins a three-week run Monday at the Manitoba Theatre Centre.

The play, first performed in 1965 by an amateur company, the Campus Players at London, Ont., is set in a small fictitious southern Ontario town of the 1920s.

Reaney, who recently co-signed a brief submitted to the Canada Council urging that English-language theatres in Canada be required to produce 50 per cent Canadian content, was critical of the plight of Canadian playwrights.

The university of western Ontario English professor, a four-time recipient of the Governor-General's Award for poetry, said the theatrical establishment has tended to ignore Canadian plays, to the detriment of audiences and playwrights.

Playwrights' Moon Rising

Recently there has been a glow along the horizon and a rustle among Canadian grass roots that suggests a dawning.

Or perhaps the rising at last of a playwright's moon.

For some time the playwrights, with justification, have been among the angry men and women of Canada.

As was pointed out here last week, according to Tom Hendry in Saturday Night the "Big Seven" professional theatres have largely ignored our native writers.

The tax-supported seven are Vancouver Playhouse Company, Theatre Calgary, Citadel Theatre (Edmonton), Manitoba Theatre Centre, St. Lawrence Centre (Toronto), National Arts Centre (Ottawa) and Neptune Theatre (Halifax).

To be fair, the Vancouver Playhouse has done more in this direction than some of the others, introducing works of Eric Nicol, George Ryga and Beverley Simons, over a period of four or five seasons.

And with Mrs. Simons' controversial Crabdance just concluded at the Queen E, artistic director Paxton Whitehead has announced that the vacant last spot on their season schedule is to be filled with the premiere of The Native, a play by another Vancouver playwright, Merv Campone.

But in general the slates of the other companies are filled with revivals and the brass-bound security of later broadway and West End hits.

Once a tide of creativity sets into flood, however, history reveals no way in which it can be permanently pent.

Sooner or later it will crest whatever dam confines it and be on its way.

▣

And this is what is happening on the Canadian theatre scene among the ranks of the playwrights.

The pressure had begun to take effect even before the playwright's manifesto which followed a huddle by writers, theatre executives and editors at a Canada Council hideaway last summer.

Tagged "The Gaspe Manifesto," it contained the 50 per cent Canadian content clause, regarded by many theatre directors as unrealistic.

Whether this suggestion is viable for all grant-supported theatres is debatable. But there are some clearly good and reasonable ideas expressed as well throughout the 19 clauses of the document.

It would seem that many institutions have slowed down or dropped support policies for Canadian playwrights — the Canadian Film Development Corporation, CBC, Canadian Theatre Centre, to name a few.

Inevitably one asks, why?

The average television viewer who has loyally tuned in on the Jalna series so far, might logically feel they have one answer.

However, and present what arguments you will, there is no way that Canadian playwrights, if they have something to say and say it well, will not win the field eventually.

They have, for example, made some important gains through a movement that has been dubbed "the separate stage."

It is, says Hendry, growing quickly. "Last year in Toronto there was one theatre devoted to nothing but new Canadian plays, this year there are three."

▣

The names of these three are Theatre Passe-Muraille, the Tarragon and the Factory Theatre Lab.

Instigators and artistic heads of the separate stage are mostly Canadian born and "their total season budgets tend to be less than the smallest Canada Council grant received by the worst off of the Big Seven," says the Saturday Night article.

". . . the separate stage is busy generating the real excitement in the Canadian theatre these days, developing the plays they hope will be successors to John Herbert's Fortune and Men's Eyes . . ."

Limitation of budget inevitably hampers, if it does not weaken, the vitality of the movement.

But Hendry reports that David Gardner, who went straight from Vancouver Playhouse artistic head to the role of Theatre Arts Officer for Canada Council, has been responsible for "modest but crucial amounts of help" being rushed to separate stage companies.

And only this week has come the news that through a $34,000 Department of Manpower grant, Halifax's Neptune Theatre is about to launch a studio devoted to the production of Canadian plays.

Further help for our militant playwrights is contained in the announcement by the magazine, Performing Arts in Canada, that they now have a catalogue of short Canadian plays available.

The catalogue includes titles, authors' names, addresses, representatives, breakdown of characters, set and fee information and a synopsis of the play. Supplements will be available as new works arrive.

The catalogue is available free of charge by writing the magazine, at 49 Wellington Street East, Toronto.

The moon is rising, playwrights. Can the sun be far behind?

Where Felines Follow

Principal roles in the upcoming Bastion Theatre main stage production of Peter Shaffer's Five Finger Exercise are in the professional hands of four busy and experienced Vancouver actors.

Of the four, two — Frank and Marti Maraden — are husband and wife. Like most Canadian actors they travel about a good deal, following opportunity wherever it beckons.

The difference with the Maradens is that they are accompanied on all jaunts by their two cats.

The cats, like their people, are thoroughly experienced in the business of packing up and taking off, arriving at the various destinations with unruffled fur and after a quick inspection of quarters, settling down contentedly.

Sam Payne and Marjorie Le Strange are the other two, playing the lead roles of Mr. and Mrs. Harrington, the couple who accept into ther home the young German tutor (Frank Maraden). Marti plays daughter Pamela.

Edwin Stephenson, artistic director of the Bastion major productions, is delighted that audiences have tripled since the 1972 season began with the musical Once Upon a Mattress.

Five Finger Exercise, a brilliant, award-winning dramatic play, opens Tuesday at McPherson Playhouse. With the exception of Friday, it will play there nightly through Saturday, with curtain at 8 p.m.

Opening Tuesday at McPherson Playhouse, Bastion Theatre presents the Peter Shaffer drama, Five Finger Exercise. Third event of Bastion's professional main stage season, it will play nightly except Friday, through Saturday. Curtain, 8 p.m.

BRIDGING THE JAZZ-CLASSICAL GAP

Without doubt one of the most distinguished as well as one of the most unique concerts of Victoria Symphony's season is coming up, Feb. 13 and 14.

It will star the great jazz flautist Paul Horn with quintet, and Amity Singers in the fascinating Schifrin-Horn-Lalo Jazz Suite on the Mass Text.

Also to be performed is the Triple Concerto for woodwind, brass, jazz quintet and orchestra by David Amram.

Amram is an American composer noted for his ability to bridge the gap between jazz and classical music with a wealth of ideas and beauty that enrich both idioms.

A profound and versatile musician, Paul Horn has taught, lectured and performed at universities all over the United States.

His strongest affinity however is for the jazz world of giants such as Duke Ellington, Nat Cole, Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, Miles Davis, Donovan, Ravi Shankar and the Beatles, with all of whom he has been associated from time to time.

The first part of the program will be devoted to the brilliantly colorful Scheherazade by Rimsky-Korsakov.

PAUL HORN
. . . with symphony

Box office indications already are that the Sunday-Monday concerts will be sold out.

This will be a concert for youth to take place at 8 p.m. at the Royal Theatre for which general admission will be $2 (tickets available at Eaton's box office) for bona fide university and secondary school students.

The program will be identical but with the addition of special selections by the Paul Horn Quintet.

Symphony Wins Plaudits 'Abroad'

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Impartial judgment is something quite hard to achieve where a favorite child is concerned. So it is heartening when an outsider comes along and endorses the "family view."

Victoria Symphony Orchestra falls into the category of favorite child for many Victorians who have paced its development over the years.

★ ★ ★

That is why the review in the Vancouver Sun Monday in which Sun music critic Max Wyman expresses his admiration for the Victoria Symphony in its concert last weekend, makes such good reading.

From the vantage point of distance and time — Wyman has not heard our orchestra for about two years — he finds striking evidence of growth.

"There is sometimes," he says, "a tendency for Vancouver music-lovers to think of the Victoria orchestra — when they think of it at all — as an amateur ensemble, or maybe a training orchestra.

"It's true, of course, that not all its members are fully professional musicians, and it's true too, that many of its members are quite young.

"But the Victoria orchestra is far more than a training-ground, far more than a collection of well-meaning hopefuls. It is a strong and valuable orchestra that the capital city should be proud to support."

He has warm words for the strings which "en masse particularly impress . . . They were seen to best advantage perhaps, in the Vaughan Williams Fantasia on a theme of Thomas Tallis . . . the work calls for some particularly sensitive and integrated playing and this, to a large extent, it was given . . . an effective mood was created."

The review, which commends guest conductor Simon Streatfield for his dignity and restraint in interpretation of the Dvorak sixth symphony, also pays tribute to Victoria's resident music director.

"It was evident on Sunday that the Victoria orchestra's music director and conductor, Laszlo Gati, continues to make headway in his attempts to make this an increasingly sensitive and subtle instrument."

★ ★ ★

Wyman observes that in the elapsed period since he last heard the orchestra it has "gained considerably in assurance and range."

The only thing that disturbed his view of the occasion was an incident when a woman cried out.

After commenting that "a little more fire, a little more drive and full-blooded vitality might in places have been in order" in the Dvorak, he continues:

"This is not to suggest that the performance was in any way soporific — though one woman did in fact fall asleep only to waken with a loud scream just as Dvorak approached its final peak.

★ ★ ★

"(Personally I found this somewhat startling but no one else in the audience seemed to take the slighest notice of the event, and I assume it must be a commonplace of concert-going life in Victoria.)"

Which goes to prove that no matter how perceptively right a critic may be on one level he can still be wrong on another.

No, Mr. Wyman, It is not a commonplace of concert-going life in this city. It only proves the sophistication and total musical involvement of a Victoria audience which refuses to be diverted from its concentration on the matter at hand.

Trapped in a Triangle of Loneliness

John Schlesinger's Sunday, Bloody Sunday has finally reached Victoria, and it is well worth the wait.

This is the newest film by the British director who made Midnight Cowboy and Darling. But Sunday, Bloody Sunday is not simply a director's piece.

Movies are a collective art; and this film has some great acting and a fine, controlled screenplay by former New York Times film critic Penelope Gilliatt.

All by herself, Glenda Jackson would make Sunday, Bloody Sunday go. With Maggie Smith, Miss Jackson is in the front rank of great British actresses. Anything she does is worth seeing.

Here she plays a divorcee named Alex who must share a lover with a man who also loves him. Murray Head is the lover, an artist named Bob; and Peter Finch, the object of half his attention, is Daniel, a middle-aged Jewish doctor.

The irregular triangle is convincing because of the script's insistence of the characters' maturity. It takes Daniel's homosexuality for granted and doesn't belabor the point.

Bob refuses to compromise his absolute freedom, forcing Alex and Daniel to accept what they can have of him. Trapped by their loves they agree.

The story develops quietly and confidently after an uncertain, overly confusing beginning. Schlesinger uses several motifs to stitch his plot together, the most basic of these the dating of events by the days of the week.

Hence, Sunday, Bloody Sunday: the end of the week, the end of the affair, a day of bad dreams, accidents and remembered death.

Schlesinger's other device is the telephone. It's nearly always ringing, bringing people together and tearing them apart. A clever way to create uneasiness. Telephones are as much an annoyance as they are the simplest electronic bond between people.

Alex and Daniel use the same answering service, presided over by a wonderful dumpy woman who cynically records the comings and goings of her lonely subscribers.

The telephone figures in Bob's final scenes with both Alex and Daniel, but you can work out the rest of the symbolism by yourself — it's not that important.

Alex's frowsy apartment is the finest set in the film. It has a slightly dilapidated beauty, perfectly matching the controlled anxiety and sadness of her eyes.

The sets are very important in establishing mood and suggesting character. Bob's apartment, for example, is filled with his icy glass sculptures — beautiful but difficult to touch.

However, it would be wrong to say Bob is any kind of villain. The film accepts him just as he forces Alex and Daniel to accept him.

Sunday, Bloody Sunday is a film about loneliness, a superior work of movie craftsmanship. Glenda Jackson is so good she leaves you wishing all women were as intelligent, fair and sensitive as Alex.

Finch is almost humorously resigned to his fate and the chiding his female relatives give him for not marrying. Head is an enigma, hedonistic and kind, but unwilling to bind himself to anyone who might take him away from art.

If this film has a weakness, it is that it sometimes seems to be manufactured, to be too carefully executed to carry all the emotional power it should bear. But it's such a good movie, it ought to be seen more than once.

At its best, Sunday, Bloody Sunday suggests Eric Rohmer's My Night at Maud's. Both deal with the affairs of mature men and women.

Both say how foolish we are to expect we can keep anything from falling apart, particularly that unstable quality, love.

'Theatre for Children'

The Canadian Child and Youth Drama Association will be involved in making theatre history in the early summer, according to an announcement by Professor Richard Courtney.

Professor Courtney, now with University of Calgary theatre department and formerly with UVic theatre department, is president of the CCYDA.

In June the organization will co-host with the United States a first international assembly of Theatre for Children and Youth in Montreal and Albany, N.Y.

Invited to participate are the Central Theatre of Moscow, Ion Creanga Theatre of Bucharest, Young Vic Company of London and the Lalka Puppet Theatre of Warsaw.

Four Canadian companies chosen by adjudication will also perform for this world assembly.

The New Stars, Where Are They?

By RON ROBINSON
CJVI Program Director

Where are the exciting music stars of the 1970s to be found? What dynamic new trends that will emerge as the new thrusts in popular music?

This is a subject for concern and conjecture among music industry leaders as we enter 1972. It is true we have seen the emergence of such names as Carole King, the Jackson Five, Anne Murray, the Osmonds and Kris Kristofferson in the recent past; but none with the excitement and innovation that accompanied Elvis Presley in the 1950s and the Beatles and Bob Dylan in the 1960s.

Where is the new talent coming from? Where the "rock renaissance" of the 1960s spawned a brilliant and bold generation of youngsters, the current talent crop for the most part is repeating old sounds. The rock idiom, after all, has been around for more than 15 years!

Although the dollar value of the disc industry is bigger than ever, it is largely the veteran names and combos who are the backbone of the industry today. While the Beatles have broken up, the individuals continue as automatic hit-makers. Presley is as strong a name as ever. Bob Dylan's infrequent albums are instant "goldies," as are releases by the Rolling Stones, Aretha Franklin, Barbra Streisand and Joan Baez.

And while industry leaders ponder the question "Is rock dead?" they have a severe problem of "piracy" on their hands. Whereas there has always been a slight amount of counterfeiting evident during the pre-tape days, the advent of tape cartridges and cassettes has seen the growth of illegal duplication for commercial gain to a currently estimated $150 million annually.

French Songs At Castle

A program of French song will be presented by soprano Lorraine Gorrell and pianist Mary Ducker at Craigdarroch Castle Friday.

The third concert in the Victoria Conservatory of Music series, Four Centuries of Song, the program will include numbers by Debussy, Faure, Franck, Ravel and Chausson.

Assisting will be Catherine Young, soprano, and an instrumental ensemble consisting of Jane Pearce, flute, Linda Daniels and Bruce Turkington, celli, Robert Winquist and Roderick Booth, violins, and Elizabeth Bredberg, viola.

There is no admission charge but donations for the bursary fund will be accepted.

Flautist in Concert

On Sunday at 3 p.m. he will be heard in concert with clarinettist Larry de la Haye and pianist Mary Ducker, at Greater Victoria Art Gallery on Moss Street.

Works to be performed will include pieces by Handel, Poulenc, Villa Lobos, Schumann and Shostakovich.

Boellaard came to Canada from Amsterdam in 1956 and played principal flute for 15 years in the Calgary Philharmonic.

He has given numerous recitals on CBC as well as solo appearances with the Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary CBC orchestras, the Philharmonic and chamber orchestras of Calgary.

Fruit Tree Pruning Demands Experience

GARDENING
jack beastall

February is fruit tree pruning month in home gardens on this portion of the Pacific coast. The work is done during the last two weeks of the month.

To understand fruit tree pruning required both study and experience. It is not a matter of cutting off everything that "sticks up in the air."

Any tree which naturally produces fruit will do so whether pruned or not. Pruning is man's idea of improving on nature, an endeavor to control or change a natural habit to better fit the standards of perfection he has formulated.

To attain this goal entails more than cutting off pieces at random. It pre-supposes that the fruit tree grower has a thorough knowledge of how the tree grows, its requirements for growth, its natural habits, and what will happen if there is interference with those natual habits.

Last fall we suggested a winter program of studying books from the library and department of agriculture bulletins dealing with fruit tree culture and care.

If you followed this plan you will have a much better understanding of fruit tree pruning.

Our next suggestion is that you attend the fruit tree pruning demonstration sponsored by local gardening groups.

Since these demonstrations are staged in private gardens containing fruits of different varieties and trees of all ages and conditions, the home gardener can gather a vast amount of practical information when all are visited.

The Victoria Horticultural Society has scheduled three public demonstrations all starting promptly at 2 p.m.:

Saturday, February 12, at 3780 Savannah Avenue.

Wednesday, February 16, at 2036 Carnarvon Street.

Saturday, February 19, at 901 Island Road.

Other groups will be sponsoring demonstrations, some restricted to membership within the group.

The art of fruit tree pruning cannot be explained in a few short paragraphs, therefore we have endeavored each year to discuss one aspect. This year we have chosen terms used to describe the parts of a tree, and how the fruits are produced.

To the horticulturist a given terms means one thing only, but the home gardener tends to apply a term indiscriminately.

The illustration (A) is a diagramatic representation of any fruit tree.

Starting from the bottom we have the rootstock, which may, or may not, have an effect on ultimate size the tree attains.

All named varieties of fruit are produced by taking a growth bud from a mature tree of known worth, and attaching it to a root previously grown from seed but of unknown worth. Thus we are sure of a tree that will bear the variety we desire.

By selection of the kind of rootstock, we control the size of tree, and any rootstock which limits the ultimate size to less than normal is called a dwarfing stock.

The bud is inserted low down on the trunk (see budding point) and this point must always be two to three inches above soil level so that the upper portion does not make roots of its own to defeat the purpose of the dwarfing rootstock.

From the bud comes an upright growth which makes the "trunk" of the tree. At the time this trunk was limited to three or four feet in height, but modern practice is to continue it right through the tree thus avoiding the inherent weakness of four branches starting from one point.

The top of the trunk terminates in a thin growth called the central leader or main leader. This leader is pruned each year to obtain elongation of the trunk from a strong growth bud.

Emanating from the trunk are side growths. These are termed laterals, while side growths produced from a lateral become sub-laterals or secondaries.

As a lateral develops, producing many other laterals and sub-laterals, it becomes a branch, which is a permanent part of the tree.

The extreme end growth of a branch or a branch lateral is again referred to as the leader, being pruned each year to a growth bud which will develop a continuation of length (extension growth) sturdy enough to carry large crops of fruit.

★ ★ ★

The home gardener uses the word sucker, or sucker growth, to describe any growth he feels should not be there regardless of the point on the tree from which it emerges.

Since the root is not the same as the top part of the tree (the budded portion), all sucker growths must be removed, together with the surrounding group of growth cells, at the point on the root from which they start.

A mass of long thin growths coming from branches are called water sprouts (not "spouts"). These are caused when the delicate balance of growth is upset. Type of soil, moisture content, water lying over winter, wrong fertilizing and indiscriminate pruning, are a few of the causes.

These are fruiting spurs, the things we try to encourage to form on our young trees by careful early pruning, and to replenish on, our older trees in order to maintain fruit production.

Inexperienced gardeners have cut off all these "dead twiggy pieces" and then been surprised the trees failed to blossom and bear fruit.

The experienced pruner will thin out these fruiting spurs, removing the oldest and reducing the balance. This prevents the tree from overbearing and results in fewer, larger, and better quality fruits.

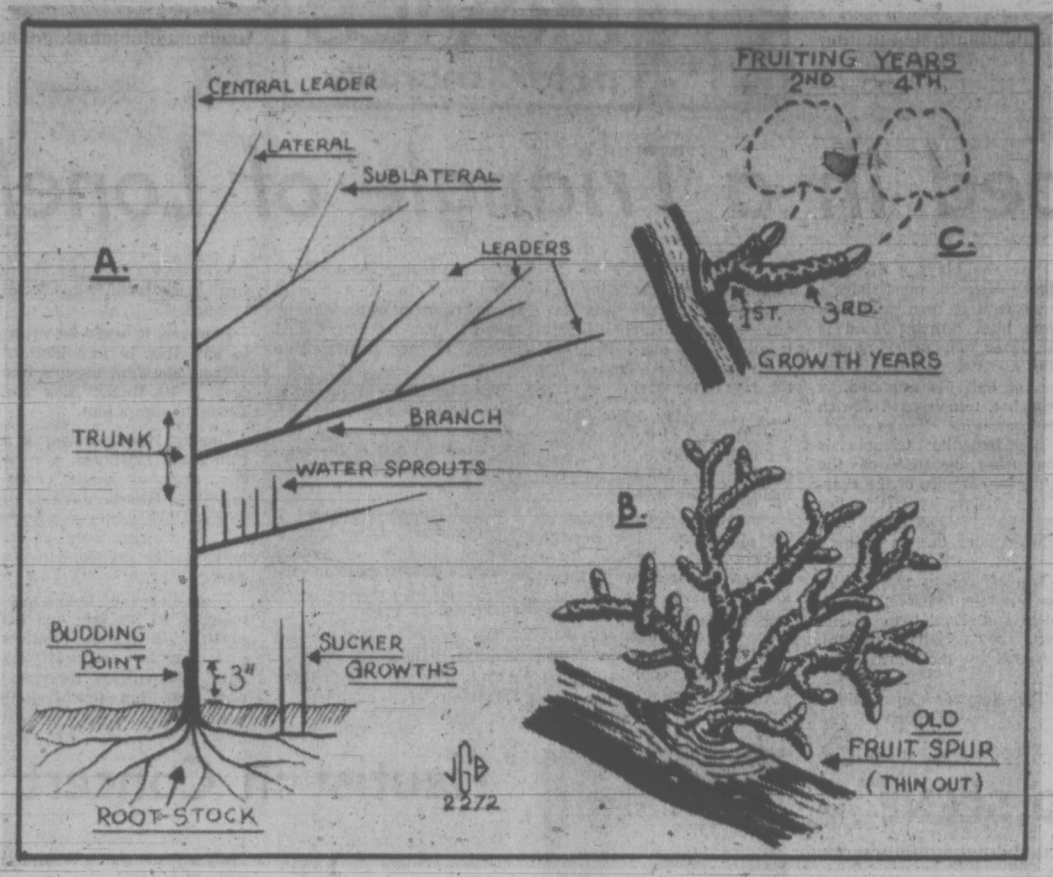
A fruiting spur on an apple will bear for about 14 years.

In seven of those years it makes new growth and in the other seven bears fruit. Pear spurs last only 10 years, while plums are finished after 6 years. Growth and fruiting is indicated at (c).

Knowing this, the pruner seeks more new growth each year on a plum and a pear than on an apple. With proper pruning a percentage of this new growth will produce fruiting spurs in three to four years.



WEEK'S WORK

In a heated greenhouse, the following bedding annuals can be sown now: snapdragon, petunia, lobelia, ageratum, phacelia, didiscus, dwarf dahlia, cleome, lavatera, viscaria. Some are good for patio tubs and balconies; others for cut flowers.

If old plants of yellow marguerite are being wintered in a protected frame or greenhouse, take cuttings now and root them six to a four-inch pot of sandy soil. Repot into separate pots of rich soil for large early spring plants. Grow them cool but free from sharp frost.

During the week, if frost is out of the soil, cultivate lightly between asparagus rows, round broad beans and other vegetables.

Look around for seed potato varieties you want to buy for planting in late March or April. You can set them out in a shallow flat of soil in full light to sprout and start rooting. Just keep them from frost.

Begin work on the raised bed for a few early vegetables. The outside skimmings of the compost heap make a good base for building the bed. Then some fresh manure before adding the rotted compost material and old manure for the plants to grow in.

Sow mustard and cress in seed boxes in window every 10 days.

U.K. Troops 'An Insult'

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuter) — Guatemala said today it considers the presence of British troops in neighboring British Honduras a serious insult to Central America—and especially to Guatemala.

A government statement reaffirmed that Guatemala is on the alert against any possible violation of its rights and said army units have been sent to border areas to counter subversion.

Guatemala, which has long claimed the territory of the British colony, protested last week at the despatch of British army and naval forces there.

Chile's Chief Demonstrates Dynamism

SANTIAGO (WP) — Whatever the result of the Chilean socialist revolution, it has already produced a leader who has demonstrated unexpected dynamism as president — Salvador Allende.

Allende brings humor, skill and above all pugnacity to the presidency. It is a brusque change for the office, whose recent holders had maintained a tradition of standing above the political battleground.

After 14 months on the job, Allende has clearly established his style: presidential dignity, but with a predilection for wading into controversy, surprisingly effective speechmaking, and complete control of a favored medium, the press conference.

Allende, 63, did not take office as an unknown. He had run for president three times, had been president of the senate and health minister, and was the most familiar leader of the Marxist Socialist Party he helped establish.

These jobs came more through Allende's hard work than any charmismatic appeal to his constituents. Indeed, during his three presidential campaigns, a strong "Allende can't win" sentiment had grown.

Allende was not known as a forceful speaker. Forty years in opposition were distilled in stock phrases delivered at annual meetings of the party, the Marxist labor federation and the various coalitions the socialists formed with the Communists.

It was a line to which the militants responded, full of fury against North American imperialism and local oligarchs, but no one had illusions of its capturing an audience outside the faithful.

Yet as president, Allende has often held the ear of the skeptical as well as the convinced. Among Latin chief executives, he is probably second only to Fidel Castro as a public speaker.

For restive Chilean audiences, he may surpass Castro. When the Cuban premier visited his old friend Allende last November, Castro was troubled that audiences were not larger and that many wandered off in mid-speech.

Allende's speeches are not as long as Castro's, but, like the Cuban premier, Allende does use the national TV-radio hookup for didactic purpose — instructing coalition supporters on attitudes they ought to assume.

In a press conference, Allende occasionally will dismiss a question, but most of the time he comes on with facts, figures and a clear argument to sustain his position.

Last month, before his party lost the byelections to the opposition, he persuasively argued that Christian Democrats and the Conservative National Party were in a secret pact against him, and that this was immoral.

Allende cited his own negotiations with the leftist revolutionary movement that has stayed outside the government because of its belief that only violence can achieve revolution.

The public will be the first to know if any compact is made, he said, adding that even while the negotiations went on his coalition had defeated the revolutionary movement in elections at its longtime stronghold, the University of Concepcion.

India Takes Hard Line on Maoists

By RAM SUNDAR
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — The Indian government is getting increasingly tough towards Maoist rebels.

Press reports say Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has asked the governor of West Bengal province to give more power to policemen so that they can deal with Maoist violence effectively.

These reports say the West Bengal police force has been instructed by the governor to comb Maoist pockets in Calcutta and other areas, and told that in dealing with the pro-Peking terrorists they need not be inhibited by the fear of administrative difficulties.

West Bengal has been under the direct rule of the federal government for the last several months. New Delhi operates through the provincial governor who is its own appointee.

So long as the province was ruled by a coalition of left-wing parties, police officials were always afraid that any strong action to put down Maoist terrorists would not get the approval of the politicians in power.

ELECTIONS HELD OFF

The federal government has made it clear that new elections will not be held in the sensitive province so long as the Maoist threat exists.

Some observers think that the recent civil war in adjoining East Bengal, which now has broken away from Pakistan to form the independent republic of Bangladesh, has further dimmed the prospect of a speedy return to parliamentary government in West Bengal province.

No one knows when the four-year-long Maoist violence in West Bengal will end. But there is little doubt the rebels are on the run in most of their rural strongholds. The great city of Calcutta has also been comparatively quiet.

Meanwhile, the government is moving Maoist prisoners in West Bengal to prisons in Tamil Nadu province in the far south of the country, nearly 1,500 miles away.

Sixth Sense the Customs Man's Weapon

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Lachapelle, regional chief of customs operations in Montreal, says "there are as many ways to smuggle as there are imaginations."

Mr. Lachapelle remembers an amusing incident a few years ago when he was an inspector at Montreal International Airport. A man who had some meat confiscated from him during a customs inspection returned the next day asking for it.

" 'But we had to burn it,' we explained, 'You see, it was confiscated.'

" 'Yes,' the man replied, 'but what did you do with the jewels I hid inside it.'

"A while later, a European passenger arrived with a suitcase full of loaves of bread. Remembering the meat incident, we checked inside the bread for jewelry. But the passenger wasn't smuggling jewelry. He was smuggling meat."

If the goods are valued at more than $200, the smuggler has committed a criminal offence and faces confiscation plus a minimum $200 fine or a minimum imprisonment of one year.

Much has been said about the legendary sixth sense of customs officers in singling out smugglers and Mr. Lachapelle believes it exists.

Countless Ways Of Smuggling Seen

"I can give you an example.

"Not long ago at Dorval (Montreal International Airport), one of our officers spotted a man a good distance away. The officer didn't talk to the man. He wasn't even near him. He only looked and then went straight to his superior officer.

"As it turned out the man had several pounds of narcotics in his suitcase.

"But a good part of the sixth sense is simply a knack of observing reactions and expressions, and for pinpointing incongruous details. This ability is acquired with time."

R. S. Ingram, superintendent of customs at Contreal International Airport, says narcotics smuggling is the most lucrative form of contraband and is controlled by professional syndicates.

The smuggling is too dangerous to be attempted by the "pros" themselves, he says, and poor immigrants and stranded students are usually hired to bring it into Canada.

Montreal harbor and airport inspectors watch closely for smuggled drugs and have discovered some with the aid of Jenny, an RCMP-trained two-year-old Labrador retriever who, the inspectors say, can find narcotics anywhere.

But in some cases Jenny and the inspectors don't have to search hard because the smuggler gives himself away.

Mr. Lachapelle recalls that in one case a smuggler was caught by a single remark.

"Isn't it lovely weather we've having," he said nervously as the customs officer checked him through. The man's plane had just landed in a downpour, and he turned out to be smuggling.

But the classic case, says Mr. Lachapelle, was one that happened to a female customs officer at the Montreal airport a few years ago. It concerned a woman arriving from Europe—a traveller who spoke no French and no English.

With gestures and signs, the customs officials persuaded the woman to open all her bags—all, that is, except the shopping bag she carried.

Finally the officer reached into the bag herself, and was bitten on the finger by a Portuguese chicken.

Bhutto Has Made Dazzling Start

RAWALPINDI (AP) — With swift action, President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto has dazzled Pakistan out of the doldrums over the loss of its east wing.

He freed Sheik Mujibur and jailed the last president of Pakistan, Gen. Yahya Khan. He seized the management of big business and put magnates under house arrest.

But Bhutto faces opposition growing in vocal strength. Most political criticism focuses on his refusal to lift the martial law he inherited from Gen. Yahya, and on a political timetable which could further entrench Bhutto's Pakistan People's party.

He has freed industrialists he once threatened to hold hostage and turned to persuasion rather than threats of force to bring back from abroad the Pakistani money supposedly hidden there.

The release of Sheik Mujib relieved pressure on Pakistan from outside. But as diplomatic support for Bangladesh grows, Bhutto is battling to keep Pakistan from isolation and to marshal support against capitulation to India on peace terms and for the return of 100,000 prisoners of war and West Pakistani civilians held in India and Bangladesh.

WANT REFORMS

His promises of reform has earned Bhutto wide popularity among voters but has caused a hunger for more sweeping reforms.

The immediate response to Bhutto has been enthusiastic. Believing they have a government willing to listen to their complaints, workers have seized factories, students schools, unions hospitals and prisoners their jails.

The access to government, and the excitement, momentarily have distracted Pakistanis from their defeat and problems growing out of it.

Are you beginning to think this way about funerals?

☐ I think many people buying a funeral end up paying far more than originally planned, possibly because they are emotionally bewildered at the time.

☐ Money spent on elaborate funerals would be better spent among the living.

☐ I want my funeral, including cremation or burial, to cost under $300.

☐ I think embalming, for purposes of displaying the body, is an unnecessary indignity.

☐ I am repelled by putting a body on display with the face made up to look "natural".

☐ I favour a closed coffin, a private cremation or burial, with perhaps a memorial service after, for friends and relatives.

☐ I feel strongly enough about these matters that I would like to support an organization dedicated to promoting simpler, less costly, more dignified funeral practices.

☐ I would like to receive a simple plan which lets me record my wishes in privacy, so that they may be filed with a non-profit organization I know will carry out my wishes after death. This also saves my next-of-kin from making these difficult decisions under emotional stress.

If you feel this way you are not alone. Over 60,000 people now belong to the Memorial Society of B.C. If you move, your membership can be easily transferred to other societies throughout North America at little or no cost.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Free Advice . . . Just Wasted Breath

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

During one of our little coffee-breaks a few days ago My Irritable Friend and I became rather catty. Nasty caty. But perhaps with some justification.

We had just had an encounter with one of our minister friends, a man to whom we refer, when we are indulging in cattiness, as The Sincere Adviser.

The Sincere Advisor actually is a very decent sort. He is a good pastor, and we have no reason to think that he bethumps his innocent parishioners with gratuitous advice. But he does suffer, periodically, from a quaint compulsion to offer unsolicited advice to his fellow ministers, advice which he seems to think will help them to correct their personal and professional inadequacies.

Every vocation, it seems, has its Sincere Adviser — self-appointed wisemen who feel driver to sort out their brethren, often by generously giving advice which they themselves cannot use and which they graciously decline to hoard. Doctors and lawyers have told me of Sincere Advisers in their professions. And a schoolteacher friend suggests that about one in six in his profession has the affliction.

Our Sincere Advisor has mellowed a little in recent years. He knows that not many of us take his advice at all seriously, but, out of the goodness of his heart, he continues to offer it. But he's not as strident as he once was, when he was just a little like Lucy yelling at Charlie Brown, "The whole trouble with you is you won't listen to what the whole trouble with you is!"

M.I.F., who himself has a touch of the Sincere Adviser on his soul, wondered if the compulsive giving of advice to others is not a symptom of unrecognized feelings of personal inadequacy or perhaps compensation for personal insecurity.

He pointed out that The Sincere Adviser indulges his compulsion usually when things aren't going too well for him. Then, with a genial smile, he pointed out to me that the only times I have presumed to give him advice were when I have a little egg on my face from the failure of some pet project. And he mentioned a distinguished member of the parliamentary press gallery whom we know quite well who is inclined to write brisk columns of advice to the prime minister only after he's had a blast from his editor or when he's hung-over.

"Well, anyway," M.I.F. concluded, "advice never hurts anyone — either the person who offers it or the person who doesn't take it. Next to playing the saxophone, the worst waste of breath is trying to advise someone about changing his ways."

CO-ORDINATOR of B. C.'s drug education program is Saanich police constable Peter Battisson, 42. In role to begin this month, Battisson will aid schools, school boards and community groups in planning drug education programs.

Social Aid For Theme

A three-day christian education conference sponsored by the Evangelical Pastors Fellowship of Victoria and other Island groups will be held at the Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church, starting Feb. 24.

The conference will feature lectures and workshops and is open to all persons working in the field of christian instruction among children and adults.

Dr. Clate Risley, president of World Wide Christian Education Ministries, Chicago, plus 15 other experts, will give advice in family relationships, counselling, Sunday school teaching and supervising, youth work, addict and alcoholic rehabilitation.

Family TV Still Goal

The B.C. and Yukon Council, Catholic Women's League of Canada, has urged its members to continue pressing the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to promote family type shows.

"We are asking for shows with good morals, excluding excessive violence, sex and drug scenes which assist in promoting the disintegration of society, Mrs. E. J. Hatherton of Surrey, convener of communications, said today.

Walker Nips Moysey In Seniors' Opener

HANEY — The luck of the draw matched Victoria's two representatives to the Pacific Coast Curling Association seniors playdowns Friday. And it was the luck of the fans to be treated to a spine-tingling battle.

Gordon Walker, a former Alberta seniors titleholder, shaded Dr. Kirby Moysey's rink 6-5 in the all-Victoria game that featured the opening round of the double-knockout, eight-rink playoff.

Walker, backed by Wayne Winkler, O. J. Powell and Elmer Hoffman, trailing 3-1 after four ends, counted once on the fifth and then made three successive "steals" to move ahead 6-3 and hang on for a tough triumph.

Victory moved the Walker rink into the "A" semi-finals along with Tony Folk of White Rock, Kells McMurdo of Capilano and Stu Patterson of Richmond.

White (Mission	130 002 010 x— 7
Patterson (Richmond)	020 101 003 2— 9
Hopwood (Vancouver)	002 020 010 0— 5
McMurdo (Capilano)	203 010 321 x—12
Wilson (Delta)	010 201 000 x— 4
Walker (Victoria)	001 011 210 x— 6
Moysey (Victoria	020 200 002 x— 5

McMurdo, who meets Walker in one of today's "A" semi-finals, downed Jim Wilson of Delta 12-4, Folk dropped Harold White of Mission 13-7 and Patterson defeated Vancouver's Wayne Hopwood 9-5 in Friday's other first-round matches.

Play continues today and Sunday with the Coast champions advancing to the provincial final.

Not a Hawaiian Holiday As Winds, Rain Arrive

HONOLULU (AP) — Bob Murphy was looking at the second-round lead. Marty Fleckman was looking at his white undertaker's gloves. And Arnold Palmer was looking for a chance to try it all over again.

"I'd just like to go out and play one over," said Palmer, who had a whopping 76 in Friday's second round of the $200,000 Hawaiian open golf tournament.

Murphy had to wipe the rain from his face before he could see anything at all after posting a hard-earned 70 and the 36-hole lead at 135.

And Fleckman, who had a share of the lead at one time, went one over par on two of his last three holes and borrowed a pair of white undertaker's gloves from his caddy to play the 18th hole when it became so wet he had trouble gripping the clubs.

Fleckman finished with a 71 and 137, alone in third place.

WEATHER A KEY

The weather was a major factor. The strongest field of the year was buffeted by shifting, changing winds and drenched with rain that went from drizzle to downpour on the Waialae Country Club course.

Lee Trevino, Masters champion Charles Coody and Big George Archer were in a group of 13 at 138 and tied for fourth place going into today's third round in the chase for the $40,000 first prize. Archer had a 68, Trevino 70 and Coody 72.

It took a score of 144 to make the cut for the final two rounds and both Billy Casper and defending champion Tom Shaw missed it. Shaw was at 145 and Casper took a nightmarish eight on the par-four eighth hole en route to a 77-146.

Canadians Ben Kern and Gary Bowerman of Toronto both missed the cut. Kern shot 72-73—145 and Bowerman 73-74—147.

Hockey Hopes Survive Despite Dozen Defeats

University of Victoria Vikings couldn't do anything with Nos. 1 to 12, but they were hoping No. 13 may prove to be the lucky one in Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association hockey play.

Vikings suffered their 12th straight setback Friday, bowing 12-3 to Winnipeg Wesmen at the Esquimalt Sports Centre. Victoria was scheduled to face Saskatchewan Huskies at the Sports Centre this afternoon.

Brian Howie sparked Wesmen with three goals and an assist while Bill Kearns and Joe Fras each added two goals. Allan Abel, Dale DeMarco and Jim Irving scored one apiece for Wesmen.

Murray Finlay, who played the first 52 minutes, blocked 35 Winnipeg shots while Robin Hay allowed two goals and stopped two shots in the remaining eight minutes. Winnipeg's Terry Ross made 22 stops.

Elsewhere, divisional leaders protected their holds with victories. Alberta Golden Bears, the West leaders, downed Brandon Bobcats 8-2 while the Plains Division-leading Manitoba Bisons edged Calgary Dinosaurs 6-4.

British Columbia Thunderbirds jumped into a 6-0 lead and went on to tame the Huskies 7-2 in Vancouver.

Fighting Scot Attains Fame But Fear of Defeat Remains

Bowler of the Week

Winner of women's fivepin award in 15th week of 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is Dorothy Jacobs, who rolled three-game series of 790 to top distaff fivepinners competing in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes. Dorothy earned award by firing games of 273, 264 and 253 in Mixed Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome.

LONDON (CP) — When fighter Ken Buchanan was made a member of the Order of the British Empire in the Queen's New Year honors list, it served as a reminder that he's come a long way from his rough-and-tumble childhood in Edinburgh.

Not that he needed it. He's world lightweight champion and was voted British sportsman of 1971.

Experts agree that hunger helps breed a champion, and Buchanan's hunger for recognition since he was a youngster has driven him to the peak of his profession.

ALWAYS CHALLENGED

"Boys in the slum area of Edinburgh where I lived would always be challenging me," he says. "They'd be a foot bigger and two stone (28 pounds) heavier but I'd never back down. I had a fight every other day."

The 25-year-old Scot has been on the pro boxing circuit since 1965 but says 1971 was the turning point in his career.

Buchanan stormed to a 14-round win on points. He became Britain's only current world champion and now has an impressive record of only one defeat in 43 bouts. Spanish champion Miguel Velasquez took a disputed decision from him early in 1970.

"My reception in the United States was marvellous when I fought Laguna and beat him," Buchanan said. "When you work hard at getting as near perfect in technique as is possible, there's a thrill in knowing that people appreciate what you are trying to do."

Buchanan has at last made it in Britain. The Sportswriters' Association voted him Sportsman of the Year (1971) and his face has rarely been out of the sporting pages of British newspapers since his title-winning fight in America.

The reason for his earlier obscurity is that most of his fights were staged in the more financially lucrative club venues as opposed to bouts for the general public in bigger halls.

"To the ordinary fight fan I used to be just a name on the back of the program pages," he recalls.

But now, as always, Ken still retains the psychological fear of being beaten, a trait he relates to his lonely, persecuted childhood.

"I'm always tense and nervous as I sit on the stool before the opening bell," he said. "It's not the pain or the punishment, the training or the lack of social life. The real killer is the pressure and strain of fearing defeat. I still have nightmares seeing myself hammered and the referee holding up the other fellow's arm in victory."

Broomball Event

Four Canadian Armed Forces teams from the Pacific Region will be in action Feb. 16-17 at Esquimalt Sports Centre to determine the region's representative in the forces' national broomball championship meet.

Group of Stars In Curling Event

The annual men's curling bonspiel at the Racquet Club of Victoria has attracted both quality and quantity.

"Known" curlers are many among the 72 rinks entered in the five-day 'spiel scheduled to get under way with two evening draws Wednesday.

The headliners include Glen Harper, two-time provincial champion from Duncan; former Provincial seniors' titleholder Gordie Moore of Victoria Club; Seattle's Ray Guertin, a perrenial threat in the Washington State playdowns, and Bernie Sparkes, who recently claimed one of the four Vancouver berths in the Coast men's playoffs.

Braves Trip Penticton 5-1

VERNON — Saanich Braves advanced to the second round of the Vernon Winter Carnival's annual peewee hockey tournament Friday by defeating Penticton 5-1.

Murray Slezak scored two goals for Saanich while Jackie Wallis, Scott Connors and Ken Poskitt added singles. Also figuring prominently in Braves' victory was goaltender Rich Martin, who stopped 25 shots.

Hansen Leads Metro Squad

Larry Hansen scored his fourth goal of the game with less than a minute remaining to power Victoria Metro Toyota to a 7-6 victory over Esquimalt in the opening game of a best-of-three midget hockey semi-final series.

Soccer Takes Rest

All Victoria and District Soccer League games scheduled for this weekend were postponed today because of poor field conditions.

Last-Ditch Shot Topples Oak Bay

Terry Godfrey was on the mark, and traffic became thickest around third place Friday in the Victoria High School Senior Girls' Basketball League.

Miss Godfrey connected for a long field goal with eight seconds remaining to give Victoria a 23-21 victory over visiting Oak Bay.

Wendy Wallace had scored a basket with less than a minute remaining to pull the Vics into a 21-21 deadlock.

Fivepinners Seeking Spots in Coast Event

Five lanes will be in use Sunday for Victoria zone fivepine bowling finals, first steps leading towards the Canadian championships.

League finalists will be competing in singles to determine one man and one woman to represent Victoria Fivepin Bowling Association in the B.C. Coast zone rolloffs here on Feb. 26.

Rolling starts at 10 a.m. Sunday at Town and Country Lanes, Capital City Bowladrome, Mayfair Lanes, Cush's Bowl-a-Golf Spa and Gibson's Bowladrome.

The top four men and top four women from the coast rolloffs will accompany a representative team to the Western Canadian and Canadian finals at Saskatoon in early April.

Good News In U.S.

Unwillingness to hear or bear bad tidings has been the "major failing" of United States foreign policy in south-east and southern Asia, one of Canada's foremost experts on international affairs said Friday.

Professor James Eayrs told a surprisingly small audience at the University of Victoria that, apart from Vietnam, the most glaring example of this failure in recent years was President Nixon's "notorious Pakistan tilt."

American partiality to Pakistan persisted to the last, he said, despite a steady stream of warnings from U.S. intelligence sources that not only were they backing the weaker cause but also the weaker side; that a war was coming soon and that India would win it.

"What was it that made Nixon go ga-ga over Yahya?" (Pakistan president Gen. Yahya Khan), Eayrs said.

'PERSONALITY'

"Partly it was a matter of personality. Indian leaders over many years had not managed to create much rapport with the White House. They were seen as remote, difficult, devious.

"The Pakistanis, on the other hand, came on hearty, gregarious, open, plain-spoken . . ."

Also, he said, the explanation lay partly in the American policy makers' "pactomania," their obsessive searching for allies.

Eayrs, a noted scholar on Canadian defence and foreign policy, used the title of his latest book, Diplomacy and its Discontents, for a fascinating — and chilling — discourse on how the destiny of nations is shaped by such factors as human weaknesses, quirks of character and ideologies.

The most intriguing problem in all politics, he said, is the problem of "how and why politicians and statesmen fail to see things as they really are, and consequently governments goof."

Such misperceptions seem to be more frequent than they were, with potentially disastrous consequences for mankind in an era of devastating weapons and ever-lessening reaction time.

IDIOSYNCRATIC

The statesman of today, Eayrs said, is shaped by a tendency to be more or less idiosyncratic, distorted by his beliefs in a system more or less ideological.

"He therefore has to form an image of his environment which never corresponds exactly with reality and often distorts it very badly."

Similarly, the diplomat on whom the statesman depends "to tell him how it really is" is prone to all kinds of human errors and occupational hazards, not least of these the feeling of paranoia brought on by working in embassies virtually sealed off from the outside world.

"The diplomat, nursing his necessarily secret grievances, seeks out his own kind and in that atmosphere the grievances swell like melons in a greenhouse."

Eayrs said it is "only human" for diplomats to want to keep their political bosses in a good humor, "so the prince or the president is very often the last person to hear when something has gone terribly wrong."

Another major flaw in the machinery of foreign policy decision making is the fact that in many cases the flow of incoming intelligence exceeds the capacity to analyse it.

There were gasps from the audience as Eayrs said that 15 million words a month pour into the U.S. State Department "when nothing is going on."

Air Attacks Just Practice

HALIFAX (CP) — About 120 aircraft from Canadian and U.S. armed forces will simulate enemy bombers flying raids over cities and towns in Eastern Canada and the United States Feb. 15-18.

The exercise, called Amalgam Arrow, is part of a continuing program to give air defence units and individuals additional training in battling an enemy air attack.

The exercise will test the areas defended by the 21st and 22nd North American Air Defence Command.

The aircraft will fly over cities and towns in parts of Quebec, Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Ontario and in the eastern U.S.

The aircraft simulating attack will be tracked by air defence radars and will be met by fighter interceptors.

Local Cetacean Credits Homo Sapiens With Rudimentary Thought Capability

Guess who is coming to dinner? Haida acts as host to McKinnon.

By WALTER McKINNON
Times Staff

Orca gladiator's station in life has improved immeasurably in the past eight years.

As recently as 1964, federal officials were considering machine-gunning him out of existence. The artillery had already been installed on the rocks at Johnstone Straits.

Today he is protected by law in Canadian waters and there is a growing school of thought which credits him with intelligence equal or superior to human beings.

How does the killer whale himself feel about this dramatic change of attitude? The Times tried to find out and this interview is the result.

"The more I discover about the human animal, the more I realize remains to be discovered."

The convivial cetacean, a killer whale named Haida who is at present preparing a thesis titled Homo Sapiens and Its Relationship to The Environment for his doctorate in human behavioral science, is perhaps in a better position than any other whale in the world to make such sweeping statements.

He has since 1969 been Whale in Residence at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand of the Pacific, and he is one of a small but dedicated group of cetaceans credited with beginning to build a bridge of communication over the awesome chasm between whales and humans.

★

Over lunch recently in his quarters, Haida described a few of the experiments he has been conducting with humans and the conclusions to which he has been led.

"For example," he says, "I believe — and I think my experiments have borne out the suspicion — that human beings are to a degree capable of reasoning thought. They have a very large brain for a primate, you know, and the cortex is well-developed."

A continuing series of "conditioned response" experiments, he says, definitely indicates a rudimentary thought process in humans.

"Over the past three years I have succeeded in training a group of humans to feed me herring on signal," he says. "And I have to reject the suggestion that this is simply an induced response because believe me, you can almost SEE these people thinking. It's quite amazing, really."

"Some of the people I've been working with on a long-term basis," he says, "are developing distinct personalities. Bob Wright, for example, almost thinks like a whale."

Haida is definitely impressed with the learning abilities and desire to co-operate exhibited by most people. But he's quick to point out the pitfalls inherent in demanding too much from them.

"After all, they really are only human," he says.

"We must avoid beginning to think of them in cetacean terms, because at this stage they have only just begun their evolutionary journey."

★

Homo sapiens, he says, can be generally classified as a "primitive-aggressive," indicating just how low on the scale of evolution it really is.

"For example, it is the only member of the primate branch which regularly and wantonly slaughters its own."

Haida was asked if he regrets the sacrifices he has been forced to make in pursuit of his studies. Does he find living in a restricted environment at Sealand, for example, psychologically damaging?

"Not really." He thought about it briefly. "Any discipline demands sacrifices." And glancing around his quarters he flashed a toothy smile. "I get my three square meals a day, I have company and there are no threats to my welfare . . . I'm quite well off, actually."

"You get attached to them," he says of his people. "They're very playful and easy to please. Wright, as an example . . . he loves to play hide-and-seek with us . . . loves it. And nothing makes our humans happier than when one of us squirts icy water on them."

According to Haida, humans have developed a very structured, restrictive social framework. "We refer to it as their pecking order," he says.

There are dominant humans and recessive humans, he says, and a very short observation period is sufficient for a whale to determine which is which.

What are his plans for the future?

"Well, of course I have years of work ahead of me right here at Sealand," he says. "I'm planning to raise a family . . . and frankly, I believe the study of human beings could keep me occupied for a lifetime."

Let's Take a Look: Curtis

Pollen Wary of Transit Offer

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Municipal leaders should "at least sit down and see what's been offered" in Premier Bennett's rapid transit system proposal, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich said today.

The mayor, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, said he's "not jumping up and down" about the formula outlined in Friday's budget speech, but felt it should be studied "after the dust settles."

However, Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria was strongly critical.

"No one in his right mind would take over a losing proposition like B.C. Hydro's transit system if only half the deficit is picked up by the province."

Bennett's offer appears to encourage municipalities in the Victoria and Vancouver regions to join forces and buy the B.C. Hydro bus systems operating in those areas.

FAIR PRICE

Bennett said in his speech "I'm sure that if the cities wanted to buy the system, Hydro would make them a very fair offer."

He said the offer applied to any municipality in British Columbia, but the capital and Vancouver are considered the only urban areas pressed for answers to rapid transit problems.

The offer by Bennett is for the province to pay half the operating deficit, not including depreciation, but including any amortized debt charges, of construction and operation of municipally owned transit systems.

The preamble of the bill introducing the offer says it is aimed at decreasing the expense of providing costly roads and parking places for increasing numbers of private automobiles. The development of transit systems would also help in "preventing and eliminating traffic congestion in the municipality and the resultant air pollution," the preamble says.

One of the conditions of such grants, the bill says, is that municipalities should "give preference in the control of traffic" on city streets to transit vehicles.

Bennett would maintain the right to approve terms of debt financing and capital expenditures on a transit system.

Curtis said the offer was "at least a recognition" of the transit problem facing the metropolitan urban areas. He wanted Victoria municipalities to sit down and talk about it, probably in the context of the regional district, and see what there was in the offer.

Curtis admitted that "it may very well be rejected."

NO NEW FUNDS

He also said large amounts would have to be spent to bring the B.C. Hydro buses up to standard in Victoria.

Greater Vancouver Regional District chairman Ron Andrews rejected the offer, saying "there is no way from where I sit that we would take over Hydro buses and pay half their deficit."

"Mr. Bennett I know and Dr. Shrum (B.C. Hydro chairman) I know have always wanted to get rid of this loser, but they are not going to get rid of it at the expense of the homeowner, the same homeowner who gives them the profit on the other side through the utility bills," Andrews said.

OBLIGATION

Shrum commented that Hydro has an obligation to its bondholders to get the best price possible in any sale of the bus system.

However, at his press conference following the speech, Bennett said he would take responsibility for deciding "fair" return in a sale.

"It is the fiscal agent who is responsible to the bondholders, mainly because he is responsible for Hydro's borrowing, and he would probably recommend that Hydro offer a fair deal because the system is costing Hydro money."

Bennett is fiscal agent for B.C. Hydro.

'Mr. Towboat' Back at Helm

Harold Elworthy, "Mr. Towboat" of the Pacific, is back in business again after a short retirement.

Elworthy resigned as honorary chairman with Seaspan (a combination of his former company, Island Tug and Barge and Vancouver Tug) last August.

He has recently formed the Elworthy Towing Co. Ltd., operating out of the marine building in Vancouver with his former traffic manager, Alex Welsh, as general manager.

But Elworthy scotched waterfront scuttlebut that he had already bought two tugs. He said he intended to get back into the towing business "very, very gently," hinting that important developments would be seen in six months.

"I am going to be very selective," he said, "I still have a few barges and will be having a building program tailored to the situation.

"You can say that we'll be in the log-barge business — we were one of the originators of the self-unloading barge."

Elworthy has spent more than half a century in the towing business, beginning as an office boy with the B.C. Salvage Company in 1918.

He began building his seaborne empire in 1925 when he formed Island Tug and Barge. The following year he bought out Gardner Towing from Capt. W. E. Gardner, subsequently forming the Straits Towing Company.

Elworthy left the management of Island Tug and Barge in 1941. He "re-acquired" it in 1943. He later bought Preston Marine Towing Company, then, Young and Gore.

Why is he getting back into harness at an age when most men are content to relax and, maybe, go fishing?

Elworthy says, "You can't sit back and go to sleep—it's ridiculous.

"There are so many opportunities and I want to be part of the fun."

He says he intends to make his operations province-wide.

"You can say I'm definitely not retired — just retread!"

Coast-Watcher Corps Urged to Aid Rescues

A Sidney marina operator has proposed a network of local "coast watchers" equipped with bearing indicators to save precious moments during sea rescue operations.

Stephen Dickinson of Van Isle Marina, a former member of the Royal National Lifeboat Institute in England, says distress calls to his office are complicated by lack of specific direction.

Waterfront residents will phone to say a boat is in trouble. But by the time the watcher's location and that of the boat has been determined much valuable time is lost.

He advocates organization of coast watcher volunteers with equipment to measure bearings over the sea within their view.

At a meeting with Dickinson Friday, provincial civil defence administrator John Erb said marine rescue could benefit from more organized volunteer help.

Prime responsibility for rescue in marine accidents lies with the Canadian Coast Guard, administered by the Department of Transport with headquarters in Vancouver.

The Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria is mainly concerned with organization of air searches and co-ordination of volunteer marine rescue facilities.

"A volunteer network needs continual updating and enthusiasm to be effective," said Bissell.

The RCC has no resources itself to directly deal with marine disasters. Bissell believes self-help is the only answer for local problems.

Erb will discuss plans with the coast guard and hopes Dickinson's idea can be linked with card-carrying civil defence volunteers. Recompense for rescuers is also under discussion.

Although there are relatively few boating accidents on the east side of the Saanich Peninsula, they can happen.

In November of 1970 a Sunday morning sailboat race turned into a nightmare when sudden squalls capsized several boats, driving at least two onto rocky shores.

WOUNDING CHARGE LAID

Charged with wounding with intent, Arnold O. Goudie, 29, of 1928 Trans-Canada Highway, was remanded in provincial court today until next Wednesday for plea.

He appeared before Judge William Ostler. Bail was fixed at $500.

Hospital authorities said Higgins is in good condition. Police said the incident occurred on the Red Lion Motor Inn parking lot, 3306 Douglas Street.

Soon at the Fox, a Taste of Hellfire

THESE LAST FEW years, the Fox Theatre has earned a reputation for screening motion pictures that stick in the memory longer than most. So when Barney Simmons tells me he has bagged an outstanding film for his Quadra Street quonset, my ears perk up.

Barney passed the word this week that "The Devils," a Robert H. Solo-Ken Russell production which has provoked American critics into a rash of exclamation-points, was ready for previewing.

"It's a rough one," he added — a remark that deserves to be rated among the under-statements of the year.

I relayed this warning to my booted mouse as we crunched along a wintry block to the Fox. There we joined others come to view brilliant producer-writer Russell's recycling of man's inhumanity to man and woman as visited on the walled French city of Loudon in 1634.

For his source material, Russell leaned on Aldous Huxley's "The Devils of Loudon," and the stage play made from that book by John Whiting.

The result is an outstanding film, right enough. I'll be surprised if it doesn't win an Oscar nomination for Vanessa Redgrave, cast as an unmotherly Mother Superior, and maybe the same for Oliver Reed as a priest whose vow of celibacy isn't proof against the lusts of the flesh.

It is also the stuff of nightmare, replete with gory torturings and topped off with a burning at the stake so realistic that you can almost hear the victim sizzle.

As two of a twentieth-century audience conditioned to screen violence, my wife and I sat through those scenes without a quiver. But there are times when we wish the film diet weren't so damnably one-sided.

Must all be violence? The intervals between such good and gentle films as "Love Story" or "A Ring of Bright Water" stretches too wide. Those were also memorable pictures: I think that others beside us would welcome more of their kind and quality.

To resume:

The showing over, the company did repair to The Mediaeval Inn, which hangeth its sign at 1005 Broad Street. There worthye host Michael Rose bade all make merry, which we did with food, wine and right good minstrelsy. Prawns there were, and a flame-red sauce to lave their tender substance, withall, and dyverse other dainties in good store . . .

Those hearty days of old had their bright side, no doubt about it! But anyone who would trade the world of today with all its troubles for them had best go see "The Devils." I can't think of a more effective antidote to romantic yearnings for times past.

There are few sights more dismal to a driver, especially if he has no one to blame except himself, than a car with a dead battery. One way to bring this sorry state of affairs about is to leave your headlights on for a few hours. At least once a year — usually in the half-dark of an early morning — I forget to punch my mount's light switch.

The second-last time this happened cost me a hike along a back-road to the nearest telephone, and a wait for a garage service truck.

"What you ought to do," the garageman advised when my beast was purring again, "is get a set of booster cables. Then anyone who happens along can hook you up to his battery and give you enough of a charge to get started."

Sound advice, as I've proved since. That pair of clip-on cables earned their keep next time I forgot to douse my car lights. Another driver who hadn't let his eagerness to start a day's fishing turn him absent-minded supplied a saving shot of juice.

It'll happen again, I'm sure. Meanwhile, by way of passing on a favor, I've supplied battery first-aid to a couple of other forgetful fellows who had landed themselves in the same nuisancy jackpot.

Like spare tires, car flashlight and other hardluck gear, this item of emergency equipment is one that I hope not to need. Still, when an occasion does arise, it's well worth trunk-space.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

A fragrant Valentine ...

We can't think of a single Valentine gift which would warm the cockles of our heart more ... make us feel more wonderfully female ... than a really good perfume! ... We rather think most women feel the same ... so, gentlemen, take a tip from us and drop in to either one of the two Douglas Pharmacy stores to select a fragrant Valentine for your beloved ... You'll find perfumes at Douglas which are available nowhere else in town ... like the exclusive Lancome ... Their "Climat" and "Magie" are delicious floral scents ... Other new and hard-to-find perfumes are "Calandre" ... contemporary and exciting ... and "Bal a Versailles" ... a lovely fragrance which seems to have supplanted Joy as the world's most expensive perfume! ... Weil's Antilope is especially nice in cold weather ... recommended for furs ... It comes in perfume, toilet water and cologne ... "Caleche" by Hermes, is another exciting fragrance ... as is "Ma Griffe", by Carven ... Right now Douglas have a special in this latter ... A bottle of spray cologne with a full size box of dusting powder for $7 ... the price of the cologne alone! ... Another fragrant gift would be a box of hard-milled, long-lasting Guerlain soap, imported from France ... Eight different fragrances in this lovely luxurious soap! ... Douglas Pharmacy, 1175 Douglas St., 385-4722 and 1672 Douglas St., 385-1541.

"After years when everything way out was in, and everyone was expected to do her own thing, fashion has tidied up, grown up" — writes fashion editor Vivian Wilcox.

And don't forget HIM on February 14 ...

While we're on the subject of Valentines ... remember that it works both ways! ... Your man will be just as delighted with a token of love from you as you'll be with whatever you get from him ... which brings us to Wilson's and some really great short sleeved sport shirts just arrived from Switzerland ... very new, very different, very "distinque" ... if you can call a sport shirt that! ... They're 100% drip-dry cotton ... which makes them terrific for travel, great for golf ... One style is cotton tricot knit, with polo collar and 3-button front ... blue, red, white, coffee or gold ... priced at $16.50 ... Another is made of blistered cotton, in tangerine, navy or gold ... This one buttons right down the front, and could be worn with a tie (one of the knitted ties would be especially good) ... $18.50 ... These shirts are totally new ... Wilson's tell us they've never had anything like them before ... So how about treating your man to one? ... For other welcome male Valentine gifts ... a fabulous selection of ties ... from $4 to $5 ... Royal Lyme toilet lotion from Bermuda ... a really fresh-smelling, skin-bracing after-shave ... $5.50 ... Avoca soap, made especially for Wilson's ... Smart leather wallets and key cases ... Give your man a Valentine from ... W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Nothing more soothing ... or cheering ... when you're tired or bored ... than a leisurely bath to which you've added a few drops of a fragrant bath oil.

Spring fashions with wit and authority ...

Did you know that the midi for spring is knee length and no longer mid-calf? ... We got this interesting tidbit of information at the Unicorn ... who are right up there when it comes to the very latest in fashion! ... And we do urge you to go in yourself and look over their new spring arrivals ... We saw washable acrylic knits in tunic length which can be worn over pants or by themselves as dresses ... A 2-piece yellow and black outfit with an anchor on the front ... A navy and red dress with round neck and ribbed sleeves, comes in both short and long versions ... It ties under the bust and is cut with fullness at strategic spots to hide any figure problems ... Unicorn has some smashing blazers in pinwale corduroy ... long and fitted ... cut somewhat like an old-fashioned riding jacket ... Gold, navy, yellow or red ... they can be worn over everything ... pants, shirts or dresses ... The smock look, so big on the Continent this year ... appears in dresses with square yokes in contrasting colors ... Saw some more of those terrific hooded maxi capes in navy and black acrylic ... a steal at $26! ... And there's an ultra-smart grey flannel pantsuit with short cropped jacket and flared pants reminiscent of Oxford bags, minus the cuffs ... If you'd like to know what's newest for spring ... go feast your eyes at ... The Unicorn, 658 View St., 385-5114.

Act younger than you are, say the experts, if you want a happier, healthier middle age.

What do you want for your first home? ...

We've just discovered something we didn't know before about the Import Shop at Standard Furniture ... the fact that they keep a very well organized bride's gift registry ... made up of individual preference lists on which the bride-to-be can check off the things she'd like for her new home ... crystal, china, flatware, appliances, linens, etc. ... There's space for her to indicate the colors she's selected for each room ... her taste in furniture and decor ... plus any other special instructions ... What a boon this is to the couple's friends! ... Instead of having to consult the bride or her family ... who probably have enough on their minds anyway getting ready for the wedding ... they just consult Standard's register ... and can purchase anything they please with the knowledge that it will be RIGHT ... and not a duplication of someone else's gift! ... What's more, they can probably find most things on the list right at Standard ... The Import Shop has really lovely imported dishes ... award-winning designs in glassware and tableware ... not to mention gorgeous cooking utensils of all kinds! ... the sort of things you'll be proud to give and the happy couple will be thrilled to receive ... If you're soon to be married, stop in at Standard's Import Shop and register your gift preferences ... and at the same time, enter for the C-FAX Bridal Fair to be held on February 27 ... Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

A French chef suggests poached eggs in tarragon-flavored aspic for a first dinner course of ease and distinction. Likewise, cold omelettes stuffed with prawns, or vegetables in a mayonnaise sauce.

These dresses are exclusive to Wilson's ...

People are talking about the Eva Fisher dresses at Wilson's ... not just talking about them either ... but buying them almost as fast as they come in ... because these European imports with the Eva Fisher label are not only imaginatively styled and beautifully fitting ... but the prices are right ... Nothing astronomical to make you shudder! ... There's a whole flock of Eve Fisher polyester dresses to buy now for cruise and holiday wear ... and later, see you smartly through the summer ... This week some new wools came in too ... Two we particularly liked are in the popular red-white-blue combination ... one striped all over, the other with plain navy skirt and striped top ... Just $75 ... and to make a complete costume of either of them, there are two double knit coats, one navy, the other white, with pretty gilt buttons ... you could juggle these around and have a whole wardrobe, almost! ... A chic dress and jacket outfit is a pale alabaster knit with printed polyester top to the dress, and a belted wrap-over jacket ... Size 12 ... and there's a red wool dress with stand-up collar and diagonal inserts in the skirt which make for a very pretty line ... The big round buckle on this is covered with little multi-colored beads which put us in mind of that "hundreds of thousands" stuff they sprinkle on cakes! ... W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Four-inch high heels on shoes ... huge straw hats wide enough to obscure the vision ... and long widely flaring pants so close to the ground that the wearer has to beware of tripping ... were among the "bone-breakers" for summer shown by Italian high fashion designers.

Here comes the bride! ...

A breath of spring blew into the Bridal Salon at Eaton's early this week ... with the arrival of some delightful new wedding gowns which made us forget all about the snow and bone-chilling temperatures holding sway outdoors ... For the bride who veers away from the traditional ... there's a charming flower-flocked cotton dress with cowl neck and long cuffed sleeves ... in blue or yellow ... (or any color you'd like) ... Wear it with flowers in your hair a la Margie Trudeau ... or with a big floppy hat ... Another cutie is in filmy chiffon with a hood ... zipped up the front, and trimmed with guipure lace ... Still another is nylon organza over taffeta ... also hooded ... with grosgrain ribbon circling the waist, and leavy lace medallions down the front and edging the skirt which fans into a chapel train ... We think these hooded gowns are quite lovely ... very young and fresh-looking ... A more traditional gown is white nylon peau de soie in period style ... high-necked yoke trimmed with guipure lace ... dainty little bows at the back, and long train ... Puts us in mind of the gown Grandma wore when she walked down the aisle with Grandpa, lo! these many years ago! ... Mrs. Watt is Eaton's knowledgeable bridal salon consultant ... go see her ... she'll help you plan the loveliest wedding ever! ... Eaton's Bridal Salon, 383-7141, local 387.

Chinese Woman Full-Fledged Comrade

● Women in modern China have gained tremendous ground since their liberation in 1949. Following is the first of three articles on the new role and position of the Chinese woman, written by Joyce Marvin, 24, a social worker at Vancouver's YWCA, who recently visited the country.

By JOYCE MARVIN
Special to the Times

As a young woman fortunate enough to have had the opportunity of joining the 15-member Canada-China Friendship Association visit to the People's Republic of China last November, I wish to share my impressions and experiences with other Canadians. The following articles deal primarily with the role and position of women in the New China.

The first article is a broad overview of the present status of women, while the second and third delve more deeply into various facets of their daily lives.

It is extremely difficult to do justice to the intriguing new social relationships which have emerged in modern China. These articles must be regarded merely as a peek, the beginning of a total and more profound understanding of a vital, dynamic and progressive society.

As is the case for almost every aspect of Chinese life, in order to fully comprehend the position of women it is necessary to keep looking over one's shoulder to pre-1949 China.

Appalling History

Only in light of the appalling oppression before liberation can one truly evaluate the Chinese woman's perception of her own movement, and the dramatic changes in her own life.

Instead of bound feet, prostitution and beatings, there is now dignity, respect and strength; from begging, abuse and forced labor women have moved to productivity, awareness and liberation.

The Chinese woman is today regarded as a comrade — she is man's full partner and help-mate. As we were often reminded by our interpreters and Chinese friends, Mao Tse-tung has written that men hold up half the sky and women the other.

The Chinese woman may be seen operating a gigantic crane at Wuhan's Iron and Steel Works or running a tractor at Hsi Pu Bridge of the Gue Ming Commune, or pouring molten lead in the Peking Internal Combustion Engine Factory.

She may also be found performing a delicate surgical operation, doing painstaking silk embroidery by hand or gently prompting little children in a dramatic production.

Women in China, from what we could observe, are productive, politically astute and highly proud and aware of their contribution to socialist construction. While loving and attached to family and husband, the Chinese woman will, when necessary, subordinate these concerns to the needs of the state. Indeed, so highly integrated are her perceptions of her personal and social existence that decisions of this nature pose few contradictions for her.

The old, the young and the middle-aged woman all participate in a meaningful way in the work of building their society.

Meaningful Work

Elementary school girls were seen shaving wooden logs in the Peking Timber Mill with their young teachers similarly engaged. At the Middle School in Shanghai, teen-aged girls were hard at work repairing automobile or machine engines and the Youth Cultural Palace 12 and 13-year-old girls participate in the identical military drills as their male friends.

In this particular "village," which in Canadian terms might be referred to as a large apartment complex, there were approximately 800 women, largely between the ages of Chinese women participate in military drill

45 and 55 years, whose youth had been mainly spent in pre-liberation days.

They knew no skills, had no experience of work in a factory, had little if any education and more often than not were impaired their movement by bound feet.

After the Cultural Revolution these women organized and mobilized themselves, determined to make their own contribution to the state.

From a nearby bulb factory, in two months' time, the women were taught how to produce miniature bulbs used in flashlights or decorations for export abroad.

Armed with a skill and supplied with machinery by the factory and materials by the state, the women were still in need of a physical structure in which to carry out their trade. So, brick by brick, the women build a processing plant from which they could expend their energy in society's behalf.

In contrast to our own society, the beauty, the value and vigor of a modern Chinese woman does not wane as she approaches 30.

Yet as we witnessed these strides in development we were also aware, and told quite frankly, that while the ideology is one of equality, many traditional attitudes still persist, especially in the countryside. Our interpreters levelled with us about the continuance of the traditional favoritism for male children in the rural areas, or the reluctance of the People's Liberation Army to recruit a family's only son in spite of the fact that there are daughters still at home.

The disproportionately low representation of women on decision-making bodies or on the revolutionary committees of factories, communes, schools or government organs that we visited supports the contention that old attitudes exist in spite of the new ideology.

Prejudices Prevail

Women workers comprise only about 15 per cent of the work force at the Peking Timber Mill, and but one out of 19 members of the revolutionary committee. At the textile mill referred to above, 13 out of the 44 revolutionary committee members are female while 53 per cent of the workers are women.

The party structure in China follows suit with regard to women, their absence being particularly apparent at the central commitee level.

In all respects, however, the Chinese woman perceives herself as equal to her male counterpart and in the context of her past, this is comprehensible. In fact, so often our interest in female representation on this or that committee met with surprise or misunderstanding.

Questioning from our Western bias, we often confused our hostesses who many times responded: "But what does it matter if we do not have statistical representation? Our interests and our needs are more than adequately met."

Trust, a very apparent and impressive component of all social and human relations in the new China finds particular expression in male-female interaction.

And the Chinese women indeed is correct in lauding the factory or the state in meeting her needs. All women are accorded at least 56 to 70 days maternity leave at full pay in the countryside and in the city, depending upon the difficulty of the birth.

In some factories such as the Shanghai Lui-Yuan Chemical Plant, women, after five months of pregnancy, need only work a seven rather than an eight-hour day. After a birth, a woman is generally allowed one hour a day, again at full pay, for nursing her child. Adequate nurseries and kindergartens for babies from the age of 17 days are in abundance at the work place or in the living quarters.

Great Social Strides

But perhaps more than her amazing strides in the improvement of her own living conditions, more than her commitment and devotion to the development of her country, more than her role in almost all facets of production and in spite of the minor discrepancies which do exist, what is most striking about the Chinese woman falls within the realm of social relationships.

Here lies the greatest lesson and success of the woman's movement in China. Lack of competition for man, devotion of one's life to meaningful goals and the development of the moral, spiritual, intellectual and physical aspects of the revolutionary human being in a society that respects and honors womanhood have produced the most genuine feelings of sisterhood that this writer has ever witnessed.

The warmth, physical and emotional closeness that Chinese women exhibited towards each other and towards the female members of our delegation are certainly not common to our experience in this society.

As I grasped the hand of a little girl during our tour of the nursery school of a coal-washing plant in Tang Shan, one of the female guides showing us around slipped her arm in mine. With obvious delight and pleasure, she bubbled: "Look at us. We are all sisters!"

Catholics Promote New 'Contraceptive'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles plans to set up clinics to teach a natural birth-control method that a spokesman says is "safe, 100-per-cent sure and morally acceptable to the church."

Called the "ovulation method," it has "made the rhythm and temperature methods obsolete," Rev. Robert Deegan, director of the archdiocese's health and hospitals department, said in an interview.

The method was developed by an Australian husband-and-wife medical team, Drs. John and Lyn Billings.

The Australian doctors say their method is based on the same principle as the rhythm method, but is much surer.

They say the method is based on a discovery that a woman can become pregnant only on days when a mucus has been secreted by glands in her cervix.

"In ever fertile cycle the woman notices this secretion of cervical mucus," says Dr. John Billings, "so it is an infallible method of determining when conception can occur."

Consumer's Code

OTTAWA (CP) — Ever been puzzled over the best way to care for a new dress? Or tried to find the tag carefully tucked away somewhere because it gave instructions for cleaning that new blouse or sweater?

Most consumers probably have, especially since synthetic fibres have added a whole new range of products to the market.

The consumer affairs department is trying to end such confusion by promoting the voluntary use by clothing manufacturers of a system of care symbols printed or woven on a label securely fastened to the article. But it wants the consumer's support.

"Garment makers don't have to use this system," says a booklet, Care Labelling for Textiles, produced by the department.

"But more and more will do so if consumers demand it. If you like the system, ask for it when you shop."

The symbols, worked out with the co-operation of industry and consumer organizations, tell the buyer the dos and don'ts of washing, bleaching, drying, ironing and dry cleaning.

"European housewives swear by a system like this," the department says.

But it offers a word of caution: "These symbols won't apply to every single textile article. And the system won't work unless consumers try to understand it and make it work."

The system is based on five basic symbols, each figure indicating one method of textile care. A stylized tub means washing; a triangle, bleaching; a square, drying; an iron, pressing; and a circle, dry cleaning.

They are printed in traffic-signal colors. A green circle, for instance, shows an article may be dry cleaned. In amber, it means dry cleaning is permissible but tumble drying should be at a low temperature. A red circle, scored by red criss-crossed lines, of course means "do not dry clean."

The box symbol for drying may include a circle to show the article may be tumbled dry, a curved line for clothes line drying, three verticlal lines for drip drying or a horizontal line for drying on a flat surface.

The iron and tub symbols apply to the complete article, including trimming, buttons, zippers, belts and lining. But they relate only to color fastness and shrinkage or stretch when textile articles are cleaned as recommended; not to other aspects of wear.

'Easy' Students A Myth: Survey

EDMONTON (CP) — The belief that sex is free and easy among university students may be a myth — at least at the University of Alberta.

A survey of student behavior showed that 25 per cent of the 282 students questioned had engaged in sexual intercourse in a six-month span during 1970-71.

"Girls don't want to be known as easy marks and the guys talk brave but don't do much," said Professor A. A. Ryan.

Many students come from small rural communities where a person's reputation is important, he said.

The survey found that the one-quarter estimated was an increase of four per cent from 1969-70. Seven per cent said they'd had sexual relations with the same sex, compared with three per cent in 1969-70.

Female virginity was considered important by 40 per cent of those surveyed, a drop from 56 per cent in the earlier study. The importance of male virginity dropped to 26 per cent from 37 per cent.

Students consider 23 to 25 as the ideal marrying ages — "certainly no earlier for men." In the 1970-71 survey, only 33 per cent looked upon marriage as basically a religious bond and 26 per cent as a legal contract.

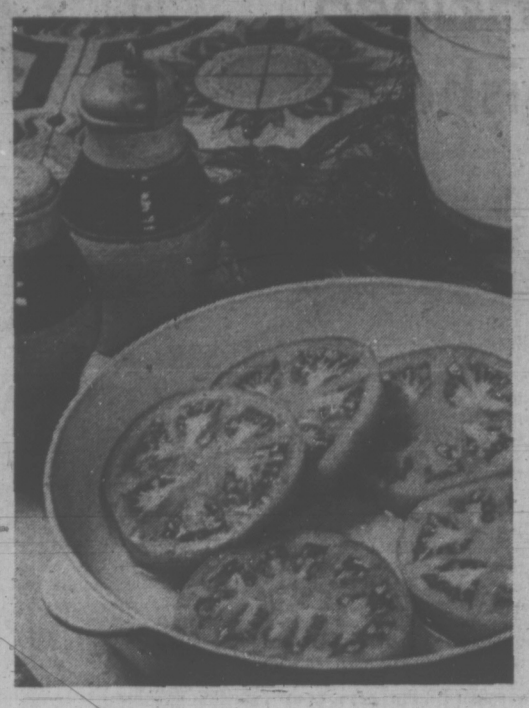
Many people react to strawberries

Wheat a common allergen



Tomatoes may cause rash, stuffiness

Many children can't eat cake

Some People Even Have to Watch What They Smell

By HELEN MELNYK
Times Staff

Many a finicky eater would gladly change places with the guy who'll eat anything.

For these people aren't just being particular. They are allergic to certain types of foods.

Symptoms and causes of food allergy differ with each person, says Carole Sisskind, dietician at Royal Jubilee Hospital. Mild symptoms include a rash, hives, wheezing and other respiratory difficulties, and diarrhea. An acute case can cause a person to go into shock or die.

If strawberries or pickles happen to be the forbidden foods, the allergy isn't much of a problem, Miss Sisskind said. But the person who is allergic to wheat or eggs, for instance, must be on the lookout all the time.

Some people even have to be careful of what they smell. An accidental whiff of a certain food may trigger an allergic reaction, although these cases are comparatively rare, Miss Sisskind said.

"Allergies may be hereditary," she added. "Though a child may not suffer from the same allergy as his parents, he will have a predisposition to something."

Controversial Subject

Food allergy is a controversial subject in the medical field, according to a local skin specialist. Up to now, there have been few conclusive findings.

But where facts are few, old wives tales flourish.

It is difficult to pin down whether or not a patient is allergic to food or something else such as wool or soap, the specialist said. And even to determine if he's allergic in the first place is no easy task.

After 5 years of age, an allergy sometimes disappears, the doctor said. But the reason for this is not known.

Skin tests are unreliable because a positive reaction may mean that, although the skin is sensitive to a food, there is no allergy to it, the doctor said.

Because of this, doctors either put patients on an elimination diet to find the offending food or have them keep a food diary, recording what foods they have eaten throughout the day and reactions they've had to them.

Mothers with allergic children may complicate the problem by being overanxious, the doctor said. Sometimes a worried mother takes away too many foods from her child's diet, with the result that he does not get enough to eat.

One mother, Mrs. Marjorie May, says cooking for an allergic child is no great problem "once you've become accustomed to it.

Although her 8-year-old son, Robbie, outgrew his allergy to egg whites a year ago, he gets a rash on his arms and a stuffy nose from eating tomatoes. He is also mildly allergic to green vegetables such as beans and asparagus.

Mrs. May prepares regular meals for the family, making an additional dish for Robbie if the menu includes something he can't eat.

At breakfast he would be served apple sauce instead of an egg, she said. When a casserole contains beans or tomatoes, Robbie is served carrots or fruit to make sure he gets his vitamins.

Eating out is a bit of a hassle because "you don't know what you're getting when you order a meal," Mrs. May said. She carries anti-histamine syrup at all times.

Although Robbie may have to eat his hotdogs and hamburgers minus ketchup, he's a lot luckier than the child who has to pass up the bun, or cake and ice cream.

The person who is allergic to a food staple such as eggs, milk, or wheat and other grains will find his diet much more restricted.

For example, the person who is allergic to wheat and grains cannot eat store bread, pastries, cereals, sphaghetti or chili sauce.

He will have to have his bread specially baked from wheat starch flour, which is not only expensive but hard to find in Victoria, Miss Sisskind said. Milk substitutes such as mullsoy and sobee are also hard on the budget.

Must Be Aware

People who are allergic to food substances must be aware o fways in which small amounts of an allergen may be introduced, she said. Miss Sisskind listed ways to avoid prohibited foods.

● Labels on packaged, bottled and canned foods should be carefully read. Checking out the ingredients is not a sufficient precaution, however, because labels are not always clear.

Words such as "sweetening" and "flavoring" may mean honey, corn syrup, or malt flavoring made from various grains.

When there are any doubts, check by writing the manufacturer, Miss Sisskind advises.

● Know methods of food preparation. If you're cooking a prohibited food in one pot and something else in anther, don't dip the same spoon from one into the other without washing it first.

● When eating out, the allergic person must know how to order, Miss Sisskind said. Although he can control what goes into the pot at home, foods prepared elsewhere may contain prohibited substances. For example, sauces and gravies may contain milk, eggs, cornstarch or flour.

If the person is aware of special food substitutes available and alternate methods of cooking, he need not miss out on too much.

WHEAT, EGG-FREE RECIPES

family

WENDY DEY – EDITOR

Following are three recipes for the person on a wheat and egg-free diet.

PLAIN CAKE

1 cup barley flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup soft shortening
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon butter flavoring

Preheat oven to 350 deg. F. Grease 8"x10" pan. Sift together dry ingredients in bowl. Add shortening, milk, and flavorings. Beat on medium speed for four minutes, scraping sides of bowl occasionally. Pour into pan. Bake 25 to 30 minutes. Rye, rice or a combination of flours may be used.

MAYONNAISE

1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon celery salt
⅛ tsp. cayenne pepper
1 tsp. dry mustard
½ cup evaporated milk
1 cup salad oil
¼ cup lemon juice

Combine first seven ingredients in small bowl. With mixer on high speed, add salad oil in a thin stream. Continue beating for three minutes after all oil is added. Add lemon juice, a tablespoon at a time. Continue beating until thick. Refrigerate. Seasonings may be changed to suit individual tastes.

BLANC MANGE

¼ cup sugar
2 tbs. cornstarch or 4 tbs. rice flour
⅛ tsp. salt
2 cups milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Mix sugar, cornstarch, and salt in sauce pan. Add milk gradually. Cook directly over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add vanilla. Chill. May be served with fruit or fruit juice.

Drugs in Animal Feed May Cause Immunity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Warning of potential hazards to human health, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) proposed this week sharp restrictions on the present widespread use of antibiotics in animal feed.

FDA Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said the move eventually would result in banning from animal feeds some antibiotics that also are used to treat human ailments.

About 80 per cent of meat, poultry, eggs and milk produced in the United States comes from animals fed drugs, the FDA said. Most treated feeds contain one or more antibiotics, it said.

The agency said a 15-member scientific task force concluded that feeding animals the same kind of antibiotics given humans could make both animals and man resistant to the drugs. As a result, the task force said, a person needing penicillin, streptomycin, or some other antibiotic to cure an illness might become immune to the drug's beneficial effects.

Imminent Hazard

One task force subcommittee concluded that the problem posed "an imminent hazard to public health." Some other panel members disagreed. So did Edwards.

"There is no information available that we could use to categorize them (feed antibiotics) as an imminent health hazard," Edwards told a news conference. "We do consider them a potential hazard."

Proof would have to be provided by next Jan. 1 for tetracyclin, streptomycin, dihydrostreptomycin, sulfonamides and penicillin used in poultry feeds. By July 1, 1973, the same kind of proof would be needed for such drugs used in feed for hogs, cattle and sheep.

Dr. C. D. Van Houweling, director of the FDA's bureau of veterinary medicine who was chairman of the task force, said the deadlines might be extended if a drug firm had not completed but was at least midway through a "good, constructive study."

Moves to Ban

Van Houweling said the FDA was moving now to ban as ineffective 1,027 antibiotic combinations used in animal feeds, and was considering similar action for nearly 1,000 more.

About 500 remaining feed antibiotics and drug combinations containing antibiotics are effective in helping animals grow faster and avoid disease, Van Houweling said. These would be subject to the restrictions requiring a ban unless safety was proved.

C. W. Mcmillan, executive vice-president of the American National Cattlemen's Association, said elimination of feed antibiotics would "without question increase the cost of producing beef."

"That will mean higher beef costs to the consumer," McMillan told UPI.

Heart Victims 'Depressed'

COLUMBUS (UPI) — A study of 150 persons who died from heart attacks revealed nearly half had been mentally depressed in the months just preceding their deaths.

Many of these victims were under excessive emotional stress, the study reported.

The three-and-one-half year study by scientists at Ohio State University also found that although the elderly are more likely to have fatal heart attacks than the young, "when a younger person has a heart attack, he is more likely to die suddenly than an older person."

The study, directed by Dr. Joseph Anthony, showed that most of the 150 victims of heart attacks, "tended to engage in excessive cigarette smoking or alcoholic intake."

Sorry About That

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The County Marriage License Department has a policy of no refunds, no exchanges and no transfers.

Clerks reported recently that a man in his 20s came in and paid $5 for a marriage license. He returned the next day and asked for his $5 back.

"We broke up," he said.

The clerks told him sorry, but no refunds.

The next day the young man returned with a blood test report and the name of another girl. He said he didn't want to "waste" the $5.

Drinking Driver Helped Instead of Punished

NEW YORK (AP) — Education and rehabilitation are replacing punishment in many parts of the United States as law enforcement officials seek more effective ways to cope with drunken driving.

"The pure penalty program hasn't solved the drinking driver problem," says a Wisconsin judge who helped organize a series of class-room sessions for convicted drunken drivers.

"What we are attempting to do is to get at the behavioral patterns by self-analysis."

The judge, William G. Callow of Waukesha County court, says none of the 67 persons who have taken the course since it began in September has been back to court.

The U.S. department of transportation spent $31.5 million in backing 35 alcohol safety action programs in 34 states and Puerto Rico through June, 1971. Nine more are scheduled to get under way early this year.

Generally the programs offer class-room studies of traffic rules and behavior, and then self-analysis on the part of the convicted drunken driver, who can avoid licence suspensions, fines and jail terms by taking the courses.

Regarding the self-analysis part of the course, Callow says of the program in his area: "The cardinal rule of the course is to get people to examine the 12 hours immediately preceding their arrest, then kick it around. It's an analysis of their way of life and of the frustrations, habits or loneliness which lead to their drinking problems."

Most of the programs are patterned after the Phoenix pioneering alcohol research and re-education project and feature four 2½-hour evening class-room sessions spread over four weeks.

Dr. Ernest I. Stewart, director of the Phoenix program, says more than 7,000 persons have gone through it and few graduates have been re-arrested.

Stewart says the program revolves around the theme "we can't do anything for you unless you want to help your-

Dress for All Seasons Shows Classic Design

Helga's newest creation is ready to enhance your wardrobe. It is the kind of classic design you'll want to keep on permanent file, since with minor adjustments, it should see you through several seasons and possibly several years.

Helga designs her clothes with elegant simplicity and allows a dress to be accessorized to the individual taste; depending where you want to wear it — office, after-five or Sunday brunch.

The slim skirt follows the body outline and the slit front offers freedom of movement. The beltline is set in at the waist with a mock button-on panel and a modified standup collar frames the neckline.

Although the original was designed in wool, it can also be interpreted in silk or a lighter weight wool for spring.

Watch For New Features

Starting Monday, the Times Family Section will present two new features.

Mary Moore's popular cooking column will appear twice a week, on Mondays and Wednesdays. Mrs. Moore's recipes feature in-season foods and are often planned for budget-conscious families with young children.

Free For The Asking, by Harriet Hart, will appear Monday through Friday and give readers a few hints on how to cash in on the information explosion. This column will list companies and government agencies which offer free booklets and advice on a multitude of subjects.

Also, in response to reader request, Spadea patterns will be presented most days in the classified ad section of the Times.

Mannequin Mother Teaches Childbirth

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Students meet Hera. She'll show you how a baby is born — as often as you like.

"We built this mannequin to fine tune the nurse prior to the clinical situation, so that when she gets to that first patient she has a higher degree of confidence and competence," Knapp said this week at the annual San Diego Biomedical Symposium.

"I expect that it might prove useful in medical schools and even in courses for firemen, policemen and expectant mothers," he said.

Knapp said the mannequin was named Hera after the Greek goddess of childbirth. She consists of pelvis, vaginal canal, uterus, placenta, umbilical cord and fetus. The machine is made of rubber and plyvinyl chloride gel.

Hera's uterus is encircled with two balloons which force labor contractions and eventually expel the baby and the afterbirth. The fetus is loaded with a speaker that produces a heartbeat. An inflatable wedge in front of the spine alters the position of the uterus to fit various stages of labor.

Housewife A Princess

TORONTO (CP) — "Just say I am a housewife and happy to be in this marvellous country where I am left in peace."

The housewife was Princess Maria Louise, 37-year-old sister of King Simeon II, pretender to the Bulgarian throne that was abolished after the Second World War. She is married to a Toronto businessman and lives quietly in a well-to-do suburban neighborhood.

Princess Maria is among a group of members of European nobility found in a Toronto Star survey to be living in the metropolitan area. Others are a prince, four counts and two barons.

'Sunspec' Industry Shines

By SONIA ROBERTS
Special to The Times

LONDON (FWF) — Today, anywhere in the world where the sun shines brightly, you'll find men, women, and sometimes children, sheltering their eyes behind dark glasses.

Yet, normal healthy eyes need no protection to adjust to any light condition — except that of snow glare, or the artificial brilliance of industrial processes such as welding. In fact, the concept of sunglasses comes from the practical use of eyeshields to protect in these special circumstances.

The story of spectacles begins in Roman times, when the emperors, especially Nero, employed precious gemstones —such as the ruby, emerald or sapphire— magnifying glasses through which to view events in the games.

In the Middle Ages monastic scholars used a form of magnifying galss which is likely to have consisted of a single lens framed in wood, bone, horn, copper, lead or iron. The framed lens was usually attached to a handle.

The invention of spectacles as we know them today is ascribed to Salvino D'Armato, of Florence, who perfected the use of two lenses with short arms, or handles, fastened together with a pin or nail so that they could be perched on the nose.

This was about 1285. However, although spectacles continued to be made throughout the 13th and 14th centuries, they were denounced by many as "tools of the devil." No woman of fashion would have been seen in such cumbersome ugly devices.

It needed the invention of printing, which made the need to read a closely-written page a necessity for a much wider section of the community, to make spectacles university accepted.

The main problem wit hearly glasses was tha tthey kept falling off the nose. Remedies were glasses fixed to a bonnet or bound to the ears with ribbon.

It was not until the 18th century that hinged side-pieces became common. They were a French invention.

The ingenuity of 18th century inventors gave birth to the pince-nez, the monocle and, for ladies who still demurred from being seen in public with true spectacles because they considered them unsightly, the lorgnettes.

It was, however, the jewelled eyeshades — a French invention known as "maisettes" — which ladies of this era affected to prevent wrinkles caused by screwing up the eyes in sunlight which set the early alpine enthusiasts' thinking about the way similar techniques could be adopted to prevent "snow blindness."

The first "sunglasses," therefore, were mask-like goggles made of leather with a slit piece of metal covering the eyes. They were held in position by leather thongs which went round the back of the head.

Given Up Sex

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I am terribly frustrated and am too ashamed to talk to anyone else about this problem. I am married to a basically wonderful guy, except for one problem. He is totally uninterested in sex. He's 28, handsome, and in apparent good health, so don't tell me to send him to a doctor. He loathes them.

He is very intelligent, has a Ph.D. in history, and his work is his life. He says people who are interested in sex are insecure, and so intellectually dead that sex is all they have left. He always has an excuse for avoiding it. He's either too tired, it's too late, or he's too preoccupied in something he's reading.

I am 27, have won several beauty contests in college. I'm cheerful, educated, mentally and physically healthy, and all I want is a decent sex life. I've tried all the gimmicks. Sexy nightgowns, discussing it with him, leaving books and magazine articles around for him to see. Even crying. Nothing helps.

We have one child (a miracle) and my husband didn't come near me for six months after that. I feel rejected. I've considered having an affair, but I'd feel too guilty to enjoy it. I don't want to divorce him because outside of this one failing, I love him.

How can I turn him on?—Abandoned in Bed.

DEAR ABANDONED: If he's physically healthy (and don't be so sure he is), his problem could be in his head. But no matter where it is, unless he regards it as a problem, which he wants to solve, you're fighting a losing battle. So you can either continue in a marriage that's sexually inadequate, or call it quits. It's up to you.

DEAR ABBY: I am interested in your views on children joining organizations.

Do you feel it is wise to force a child to join groups such as Girl Scouts or Boy Scouts when the child shows no interest in being a part of it?

I am accused of letting my children rule me because I have given them a choice in such things. It has been suggested to me that children are not always a good judge of whether or not they'll enjoy something, and often find they enjoy things they were negative about to start with. What do you think?—A Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: I wouldn't "force" a child to join anything, but if I thought he would gain from it, I would certainly present it in the most attractive way possible.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sunday, February 6, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New approach to accomplishing unpleasant tasks is required. Your job is to collect. You will hear and read many excuses, sob stories. But maintain independent stance. Be yourself. No need to take back seat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Tread cautiously. Take no person — or situation — for granted. Be an excellent listener. Make concession to partner, mate. You have chance now to get at truth — if patient. Share knowledge. Teach and learn.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stick to practical issues. Tie loose ends. Be willing to share with associates. You can now give with sure knowledge that you also will receive. Join in happy occasion. Tension is relieved by social event.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All stops may be out; you get chance to prove major points. Don't do things halfway. No lukewarm methods. Go all the way or don't go at all. Modernize concepts. Give special attention to children.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Relief from recent pressures indicated. Welcome visitors. Change routine, social contact now could result in real progress. Gemini and Virgo persons play prominent roles. Avoid tendency to rationalize.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain valid hint from Leo Message. Those you come into contact with can offer aid, constructive suggestions. Key is to listen—and evaluate. Relatives are much in picture. See through maze of confusion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Browse and shop —genuine bargain is obtainable. Don't be discouraged by temporary delay. Know that surface indications can be deceiving. Pisces person plays prominent role. Question of budget is paramount.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Circumstances turn in your favor. You can be at right place at right time. Those in positions of authority appreciate your efforts. Set pace — and example. Be receptive to new ideas. Capricorn is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your appeal broadens. More persons are drawn to you. Help one who confides problem. Don't cast first stone. Humanitarian approach succeeds. You are capable now of completing important assignment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You gain through fresh outlook. Avoid cliches. Say what you mean — Mean what you say. Accept invitations. Change routine. Some hopes can now be transformed into realities. See overall picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Hunch can spark actual advancement. Prestige rises if you share knowledge. Steer clear of the petty. Golden Rule now works wonders. Meaningful compliment is received from one you respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Journey may be on agenda. Open lines of communication. Strive to understand those who may hold unusual views. Sense of humor proves great asset. See overall situation. Leave details to others.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, able to appreciate music and art. Unusual voice is indicated — and this helps make you attractive to opposite sex. August could be one of your most significant months this year.

Forecast for Monday, Feb. 7, 1972

ARIES (March 20-April 19): Money and friends make poor mixture at this time. You finally get inkling of where you want to go. You won't have to go alone. However, you should set your own policy and refuse to be diverted. You will comprehend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Where there was inactivity there now is action. You may appear to be at cross-purposes with professional superior. But this boomerangs in your favor. Adhere to principles. Contract, agreement may be delivered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work goals come closer. You are reunified with one who shares and respects your interests. Combine vision with practicality. Prepare and build. Make important contacts. Improve public relations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Area that had been unfortunate for you may now do an about-face. Opponents are transformed into allies. Increase knowledge. Be a big person in way which sets example for others. Change is beneficial.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Situation is brighter than you might imagine. Study Cancer message. Be ready for change, progress. Move with times. Family member suggests adjustment. Consider it. Be determined, but avoid obstinacy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't overlook details. Apparent minor matters need attention. Those who depend on you make extra demands. Check health of pets. Creative endeavor is lokely to succeed. Display greater self-confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Overcome tendency to be impatient. You are on brink of profitable move, discovery. But premature action could result in loss, delay. Avoid extravagance. Be a comparison shopper. Chouse quality.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will handle more responsibility. Rewards also will be greater. In personal area, special relationship is settled — one way or another. It is better to finish than to start; find ways of getting message across.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money picture brightens. But don't attempt too much; too soon. Opportunities are present. Strike hard and sure — and do so in original manner. Create your own traditions. Don't be in awe of one who does much talking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotional life improves. You have more mature stance. One who appeared indifferent becomes warm. Realize your own worth. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Mere words will not suffice. Get proof.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Prospects are brighter — and so are you. You are more attractive, especially to opposite sex. Some comment that you seem changed. Enjoy yourself. Accept social invitations. Brake from routine.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Income from occupational efforts increase. Your views are vindicated, personally and professionally. But avoid any tendency to be smug. Key now is to be gracious, receptive. You're going places.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are a spiritual person, always concerned with reasons, motives and extenuating circumstances. You refuse to cast first stone and you seldom, if ever, condemn. New starts this year lead to success, fulfillment, with July indicated as an outstanding month.

Radio Traces Attack

AOSTA, Italy (Reuter) — Doctors knew instantly when lone mountaineer Yves Pollet-Villard had a heart attack high on Mont Blanc: He was wired to an electro-cardiograph linked to them by radio. The French alpinist had been alone for six days near the top of 15,781-foot Mont Blanc, studying how man stood up to isolation at high altitudes when the heart attack — not serious—struck.

Student Birth Control In Vending Machines

BRANDON (CP) — There will be no referendum held on Brandon University campus to determine whether students favor the installation of prophylatic vending machines, the university's board of governors was told this week.

Student board representative Ken Johnson said the student council met and decided a referendum was not necessary.

Mr. Johnson said "not one student has come to council opposing the decision to install the machines. There have been no complaints."

The issue generated public interest late last year when the board announced its decision to install the machines on campus and led to the resignation of R. O. Lissaman, a member of the board of governors and a former Conservative MLA.

The board announced that Mr. Lissaman's resignation, effective immediately, had been accepted.

Four letters opposing the installation of the machines were received, three from local churches and one from the Brandon Ministerial Association.

Mr. Johnson said the student council is considering the feasibility of a non-credit course on human sexuality being offered by the university. He said council was aware community feeling may be against the installation but he suggested those feelings might be because "there has not been an adequate program of education on human sexuality. We (council) feel such a course should be offered as a means of educating people in their responsibilities as individuals."

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to all my friends and neighbors for their expressions of sympathy extended to me during the passing of my dear husband Frank. Special thanks to those who so kindly donated to the Canadian Cancer Society and to Rev. Dr. E. M. Smiley, Drs. Kendrick and Rasmussen and to the Oak Bay Police and Ambulance Service.
Lillian M. Bigelow

I wish to express sincere thanks to the nurses and staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital for their care and kindness to my late husband, J. A. (Fred) Matthews, during his illness. Also thanks to relatives and friends who helped to make my bereavement a little easier. Very special thanks to Dr. Archie G. Gray. Mrs. Ivy Matthews.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DARLEY — In loving memory of Elizabeth Darley, our dear Mother and Grandmother, who passed away on February 5th, 1971.

Let's talk trail bikes.
Why buy Suzuki?
Because Suzuki is the world champion. Suzuki is the only Japanese manufacturer to ever win the world moto-cross title. Suzuki has won this title two years in a row.
SUZUKI — CHAMPION
250 c.c.
400 c.c.
500 c.c. classes
Suzuki beat the best Europe had to offer. Suzuki beat the world.
For the average rider all Suzuki motorcycles offer: Durability of a champion, superior handling, highest power to weight ratio, quiet mufflers, excellent warranty.
Why not ride a winner?

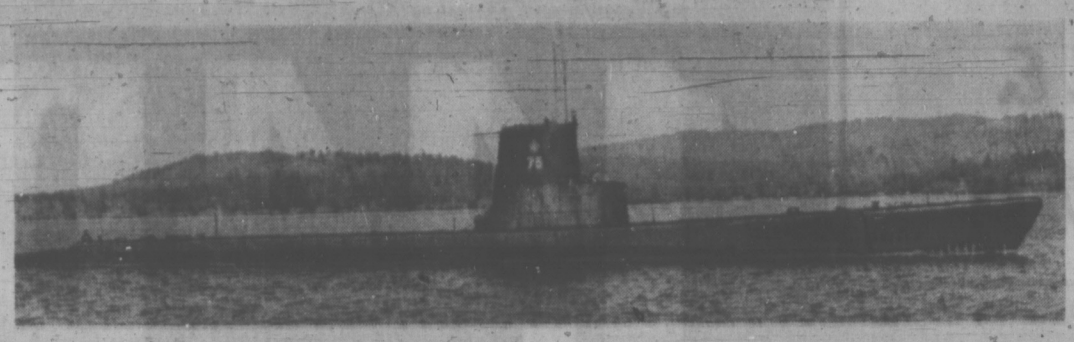
Doughty Journalist Braves the Deep

Sub Men Proud, Jealous Fraternity

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Being assigned by one's city editor to take a trip in a submarine with a few other media members sounds kind of fun, a chance to unleash at least for a few hours that primitive Nautical Man who's supposed to lurk beneath all our landlubber exteriors.



"Up 'scope . . . fire one . . ." eerily pinging asdic . . . shades of all those Alan Ladd-Tyrone Power movies on the epic underwater thrillers of the Second World War.

But the night before the big day little pinpricks of doubt start piercing that zestful anticipation. You know, just supposing if . . .

Too late, though. Mention such misgivings to the city editor and he'll drift off into one of those wistful visions of a minor disaster on his marine doorstep.

No loss of life wanted, of course — he's not that ghoulish. A nice little crisis lasting a few hours will do, with a staffer conveniently on hand to give his fish's eye view of every taut, anxious minute.

So put on a brave, smiling front and no doubt the navy chaps will do their best to reassure us, dispel our fears.

That's what we thought.

The first jolt came even before we boarded HMCS Rainbow as DND information officer Maj. Vic Keating casually remarked that the planned trip and trim-dive in the Juan de Fuca Strait had almost been cancelled the day before because of a spot of technical trouble.

Significant looks and nervous jokes were exchanged over the coffee mugs.

Then it was time to board that sinister black hull, and scarcely had our feet clattered on deck when we were being asked to jot down the name and address of our next of kin. Was it imagination, or did the explanation "It's just routine" ring a little hollow?

* * *

But worse was yet to come. There was the commanding officer, Lt.-Cdr. Raymond Hunt, blandly saying the Rainbow was a 27-year-old veteran long since pensioned off by the United States Navy whence she came.

And there was Sgt. David Brygadier telling us we were on an "old, tired boat" with a chronic spares problem that forces the crew to beg, borrow, steal and improvise bits and pieces of equipment in the constant challenge to keep her afloat and submerged.

Why, asked one reporter plaintively, didn't the P.R. people give at least a hint of all this in the original invitation?

Like, for instance, "Come for a ride in our tired 27-year-old sub and bring along some baling wire, just in case . . ."

However, qualms were soon forgotten in the fascination of exploring what is still, despite her advancing years, a lethal fighting machine; in listening, if at times only semi-comprehendingly, to explanations of her technological intricacies.

Most visitors peering round a submarine for the first time will probably agree that the overwhelming impression is one of being confined in a suffocatingly small space.

The feeling is amplified the more you clamber, doubled up, through tiny bulkhead hatches, squeeze through preposterously narrow passages, inch cautiously up vicious-looking companionways.

How can anyone endure such conditions for more than a few hours, let alone live and work in them for days at a stretch? How can anyone sleep on those miniscule bunks and not brain himself nightly on the protuberances bare inches above his head?

The answer, of course, is that most people can't. Submariners are a special breed who not only endure cramped living and working conditions but take a perverse pride in them.

But, as Hunt pointed out, intensive psychological screening is needed to weed out those who will obviously not fit this peculiar mold.

"Officers and men have to work together without personality conflicts, they have to help each other. They've got to be easy-going, self-reliant characters, and certainly not lazy."

* * *

In most cases the testing of would-be submariners — and there are scores on the waiting list — is pretty successful. But Hunt remembers only too clearly one case which wasn't.

"This chap arrived on a Monday just as we were starting a five-day cruise . . . and he didn't realize he had claustrophobia until he got here.

"There was no way we could help him by turning back. I don't think he got any sleep until we returned on the Friday."

Stocky, with flaming red beard and penetrating blue eyes, Hunt himself is the archetypical naval officer. He's laconic, witty, and his respect for his crew is obviously reciprocated.

What makes a man want to serve in submarines?

Partly it may be the extra money, Hunt concedes. A leading seaman who has completed his seven-month qualification course in subs gets $120 a month more than his surface counterpart.

But there's more to it than that, the sense of belonging to an elite club whose members are deeply interdependent and who gain enormous satisfaction from mastery of a difficult job.

To make it to the top, a submarine officer has to be better than good. The qualifying course for commanding officers at the Royal Navy submarine school in Gosport, England, is the toughest of its kind in the world.

Hunt, who graduated from the five-month course in December, 1969, explained why it's called "the perisher." The failure rate is between 50 and 60 per cent, and if an officer flunks it — no matter how good he was considered as a submarine officer — that's the end of his underwater career.

* * *

Incredibly, his executive officer, Lt.-Cdr. Lloyd Barnes, 31, from Toronto, said he's looking forward to taking his perisher in 1973.

He'll be very disappointed if he fails, he said, adding: "But I've covered enough tracks so that I can fit into a slot elsewhere if that happens."

On one occasion when the Rainbow was holding open day on a visit to Portland, Ore., Hunt asked his Chief Petty Officer to do something about making the naked charms less obvious.

* * *

The order went down, and when the visitors came aboard lo and behold, decency prevailed in the form of dainty paper bikinis pasted over the vital target areas.

Hunt shrugged his shoulders helplessly as he recalled: "We pointed out this wasn't suitable disguise, so the next thing that happened was the bikinis were removed and the girls were wearing masks over their faces . . ."

HUNT
. . . beat perisher

All the same, there was a pronounced wistful tone in Hunt's voice when he said: "I'd love to drive a nuclear submarine some day."

Clean Air Would Cut Cancer Dead

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Illinois professor says that the number of lung cancer deaths in large cities could be lowered substantially if air pollution was reduced.

Dr. Bertram W. Carnow of Chicago, a professor in the university's college of medicine and director of the school's environmental health resources centre, was speaking to a meeting at the University of Toronto about respiratory disease.

Dr. Carnow said a comparison of lung cancer statistics with air pollution levels in 48 states have convinced him that a 50-per-cent reduction in air pollution in large cities would lead to a 20-per-cent reduction in lung cancer deaths.

He said that for every microgram of benzpyrene in 1,000 cubic metres of air there was a five-per-cent increase in lung cancer. Benzpyrene is a breakdown product of fossil fuel combustion.

Dr. Carnow said cigarette smoking still accounts for most lung cancer, and smoking and air pollution together form a dangerous combination.

Dr. Carnow also said that unexplained infant deaths and illness from chronic bronchitis and emphysema also occur more often when air pollution is high.

Australia's Great Barrier Reef a Fragile Wonder

By HARRY E. MERCER

A growing public awareness of ecology in Australia is causing some nervous rethinking about the Great Barrier Reef.

In the past the average Australian took the permanence of this natural wonder for granted. The Reef was so huge and its inhabitants were so numerous and diverse that it seemed nothing could significantly injure it.

Not so, warn the biologists.

In fact, they point out, it is the very complexity of interacting species that makes the Great Barrier Reef one of the most delicately balanced of all ecosystems.

Destroy one of the basic links in the incredibly complex food chain, such as plankton or the coral animal, and the entire ecosystem as we know it would fail.

GOOD OMEN

Recent company applications to drill the Reef for oil and to mine its vast limestone deposits have been flatly turned down, largely as a result of public outcry.

More recently, there has been a demand to set up a Great Barrier Reef Authority to act as guardian of the entire reef and its waters.

ECOSYSTEM

The brilliant and muted colors enchanted them, the fantastically shaped and unbelievably numerous creatures amazed them. They rarely thought beyond that.

But now a growing number of ecologically-minded visitors view the Reef for what it is biologically — an immensely involved ecosystem with hundreds of thousands of species interacting while working at staying alive.

This kind of visitor knows that if he lifts a small rock and leaves it overturned the lives of thousands of creatures are threatened.

They know too that bird life is as much a part of the Reef's ecosystem as the coral and the fish.

Biologists have estimated that as many as 10 million sea birds may occupy a coral cay only a few acres in area.

The birds are mostly terns, herons, cormorants and the comical shearwater. One of the shearwater's favorite habitats happens to be a resort, Heron Island.

Shearwaters, locally known as mutton birds, migrate annually from Asia in countless millions. They swoop in from the north in huge rustling flocks, crash-land on the beach and waddle into the sandhills to dig burrows, where later eggs are laid and hatched.

STANDING ROOM

On Heron Island it pays to get up at dawn when the mutton birds are in residence and watch them take off on their daily fishing expedition.

They spill out of the sandhills onto the beach until there is barely standing room. Then they all try to take off together, waddling, flapping, kicking, struggling to get airborne. Amazingly, they usually all make it.

At sunset, with bellies full of fish, back they come, great clouds of them, each bird falling squarking beside its own burrow.

To walk through a mutton bird rookery at night is an eerie experience. From thousands of burrows come the weirdest of sounds — groans, wails, screeches, gurgles, coughs.

Mutton birds are completely unafraid of humans. On Heron Island they wander into the dining room, the bar, even into the bungalows.

They are unafraid because in that part of Australia the mutton bird is not human prey. If all the Reeef's creatures were in the same category this most delicately balanced of all ecosystems would probably stay that way forever.

GREAT BARRIER REEF teems with marine life in fantastic variety and number. It fringes Australia's north-east coast for 1,250 miles but despite its complexity and great size it is delicately balanced ecologically. Conservationists have successfully resisted attempts to drill the reef for oil and to mine its vast deposits of limestone. Today there is a growing demand that the Great Barrier Reef's entire 80,000 square miles be protected forever as a national park. (Australian Tourist Commission Photo).

Socio-Economic Structure Firm

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Latin America, a part of the developing world, is developing urban problems that are enough to make some city planners yearn for a return to nature.

Modern technology and a continuing flight of peasants to urban areas have created air, noise, ground and water pollution problems in many large cities.

In some, the population growth rate runs higher than seven per cent and a dilemma facing city planners is that for each improvement in services, urban life becomes that much more enticing to potential migrants.

Mexico City is perhaps the best example of a city waging a losing battle against air pollution. A study by the Pan American Health Organization disclosed that Mexico City has the highest carbon monoxide rate in the world.

Open burning of garbage and some 5,000 smog-belching factories which ring the city are partially to blame but the real culprit is automobile traffic, which is said to account for 60 per cent of the carbon monoxide total.

ANDES FORM TRAP

A steady wind from the southwest picks up sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxide over the industrial districts and to this is added dust and carbon monoxide from the downtown area. In winter, an upper layer of cool air caps the polluted mess, and Santiago lies trapped in dirty air.

Ground pollution, the spread of disease and social disorders are common characteristics of the slum and squatter settlements that surround most major Latin American cities. The newfound affluence of Caracas, Venezuela, has attracted hordes of migrants who live in shanties that straggle up steep hills which ring the city on all sides. A study shows that 800,000 persons—more than half under 20 years of age—live in these crude dwellings and government efforts to clear them away often are met with violence.

INVESTMENT HUNT

But the Latin American city with perhaps the most challenging problems is Sao Paulo, Brazil, which, says a two-year-old report, will be the largest city in the world by 1990, with a population of 19 million.

Sao Paulo is Brazil's industrial backbone, whose job-creating machinery contributed to the addition of 3.6 million persons to the city in just a decade. Undaunted by the fact that most of the streets are unpaved and two-thirds of the houses have no sewers, Brazilians continue to pour into Sao Paulo.

There now are more than eight million persons in the 30-community metropolitan zone.

Two-thirds of all Brazil's industry is said to be located in Sao Paulo and on some days the city is barely visible from an overhead airplane. Problems such as these led the UN Economic Commission for Latin America to conclude that investment in many big urban areas "is cancelled out by the growing social costs of

Nova Scotia Struggles To Fill Wine Demand

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — When it comes to growing grapes for the wine trade Nova Scotia is at the fledgling stage.

But it is struggling to catch up to supply its own winery and the native thirst expected to reach one million gallons during the next decade.

The climate has thwarted the work of horticulturists who have evaluated more than 100 varieties at the research station here since 1913.

"We can only conclude that our failure to reach the desirable degree of maturity was the lack of sufficient heat units during September," said Dr. D. L. Craig, head of the small fruit crops section at the federal research station here. He explains that warm temperatures during the last few weeks prior to harvest are a prerequisite for proper maturity.

Prior to the 1960s there was no particular interest in growing grapes for commercial wine purposes in Nova Scotia.

"This changed in 1962 when several groups of people made inquiries regarding the feasibility of growing grapes in the province for the wine trade," said Dr. Craig.

MATURITY NOT REACHED

A regional grape variety testing program was started and "when we concluded the testing in 1969, the most obvious thing was the failure of any variety to obtain the level of maturity desired."

However, enough information was gleaned to interest Rudi Mueller, plant superintendent and wine maker at Abbey Wines Ltd. in Truro.

He looks at the grape growing potential in Nova Scotia optimistically.

"The department of agriculture has done tremendous research work on varieties that were available and I think we will have a variety suitable for wine making."

Next spring the experimentation will continue with plantings of Russian varieties developed in the southern part of the Soviet Far East.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old man who broke the law to feed a "wretched" heroin habit was sentenced by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday to six months in jail on three charges of obtaining money by false pretences.

William J. Tennant, of 2701 Peatt Rd., was given six months concurrent on each of the three counts, and was ordered placed on probation for 18 months after his release.

Tennant obtained $110 with three worthless cheques from Fuller's Red and White Store, 893 Goldstream, in December.

"I am always distressed when I see a young man turning to crime to supply a heroin habit," Ostler told the accused. "In your case it has resulted in a substantial criminal record and a wretched habit."

★ ★ ★

Kenneth R. Penston, 26, of 304 Oswego, was fined $250 and placed on one year's probation for stealing four tires, rims and hubcaps, Jan. 16. He was given five months to pay the fine.

Valerie Patricia Smith, 17, address unknown, was given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months' probation for shoplifting.

Steven Wayne Shingles, 17, of 893 St. Patrick St., was remanded to Feb. 15 for presentence report and sentence after he pleaded guilty to theft of two automobiles.

Police said Shingles and a juvenile companion stole one car Thursday night, then picked up another one to push the first car when it stalled.

DRINKING DRIVER DRIVES IN DRINK

The lesson emerged in provincial court Friday when Arthur Elliott Inglis, 22, of 2081 McNeill, was fined $350 and given a four-month partial driving ban.

He drove to Cattle Point, down a boat ramp and into the water and was forced to swim 30 feet back to shore.

Because he told police later "somebody told me" to drive down the ramp, authorities conducted a fruitless search of the area around the plunge.

New Home Starts Rising, Multiple Dwellings Down

New housing starts rose by 21 per cent in metropolitan Victoria last year, but the proportion of apartment and row housing types declined slightly.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. records show total starts in B.C. last year reached 34,765 units, up from 27,316 in 1970, making 1971 a record year as it was for Canada in total.

Between the two metropolitan areas, Victoria had a higher percentage increase, even though its total number of starts fell far short of Greater Vancouver.

Bur in the 10 smaller centres of the province — 10,000 population up to metro status — the overall improvement in new housing starts was 68 per cent, with Kamloops, Prince George, Nanaimo and Kelowna making the largest contributions.

NHA ACTIVE

More of the dwelling starts than ever before were financed through National Housing Act mortgages, but the ratio remained about level with 1970 at 34 per cent, of which 20 per cent were single family type residences and 50 per cent multiple dwellings.

Compared with 1970 the Greater Victoria starts in December were fewer — 126 to 146 — but the year total rose from 2,359 to 3,102 to account for the 21 per cent hike.

Vancouver starts went up 14 per cent to 15,553.

Total units completed in B.C. during the year also was a record at 30,478 CMHC reports.

Victoria had fewer completions in 1971 — 2,836 units compared with 3,184 — g8t ther were more under construction at year-end — 1,767 vs. 1,505.

The shift in type of dwelling unit is shown in the 1,748 apartments and row houses, or 68 per cent of the total in 1970, compared with 2,068 multiple units, or 66 per cent of the total last year.

To complete the comparison, there were 811 single or semi-detached units started in the capital area in 1970 and 1,034 last year.

Curtis Defends Islands' Economy

Regional district chairman Hugh Curtis said Friday that building statistics refute a charge that the Gulf Islands economy has come to a halt.

The charge was made earlier this week by Ted Delmonico, a Salt Spring Island resident who favors establishing a separate Gulf Island regional district.

Delmonico said since the islands became part of the Capital Regional District "the islands' economy has come to a dead halt."

Curtis said that between July and December of 1970 on Salt Spring Island, when the regional district became responsible for building inspection, permits worth $467,334 were issued. During all of last year, the figure was $1.85 million.

In the Outer Gulf Islands, permits worth $289,875 were issued between July and December of 1970, increasing to $1.77 million for 1971.

SHOT DOWN

"It shoots down in flames the suggestion that because of regional district involvement, activity has slowed," he said.

"I think that I'm going to adopt a new tack with the islands, attempting to correct all inaccurate statements that are made. The facts won't support most of their statements."

Guild Holding Hearings

The Newspaper Guild, with 32,000 members in the U.S. and Canada, decided to hold the hearings after representations from Canadian members at the union's convention last year.

The five-member committee, headed by TNG president Charles Perlik Jr., will open the public hearings in Montreal Feb. 28 and move to Toronto and Winnipeg before closing hearings in Vancouver March 7.

On the committee will be a member of the Victoria Newspaper Guild, Roger Stonebanks, a reporter with the Times and a Guild vice-president.

There are about 3,000 Canadian members in TNG. The hearings, which will accept presentations from outside the publishing and broadcasting industry as well, will collect opinions on the feasibility of establishing a Canadian national guild office and elected director.

Long-Time Resident Dies at 88 Years

Elizabeth Maude Stevens, 1475 Fort St., has lived in Victoria for 87 years. Her husband, Alec V. Stevens, was a prominent lacrosse player in the early part of the century, and played with such greats as Boss Johnston, who later became B.C. premier, and Lester Patrick.

James Bay Talks Jobs

The James Bay Local Initiative Project will hold three meetings next week to discuss community issues and neighborhood improvement programs.

Meetings will be held at 511 Michigan On Monday at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday, 7:30 p.m. and Wednesday, 10:30 a.m.

The L.I.P. is also offering anyone living in the James Bay area assistance in matters relating to shopping, doctor appointments, tenant-landlord conflicts, welfare and youth problems.

'Bellow's Landing' Well Covered by Early Baedeker Issue

By DAVE McINTOSH

The German publisher's first guidebook of Canada appeared in 1894. The parliamentary library possesses one of the now rare copies and it shows that Karl, his son, Fritz, and their researchers didn't miss much. To wit:

—"The hotels are apt to be crowded during the parliamentary session, usually February-May, and it is then advisable to order rooms in advance—furnished apartments from $2 per week are numerous."

—The French-Canadian MPs are far superior to their English-speaking confreres in accuracy of expression and grace of style. Even when they speak in English these qualities are noticeable."

—The Houses of Parliament and all government offices were located in only four buildings: Centre, East, West and Langevin Blocks. The first three were built in 1859-65 for a total of $5 million.

—"Few of the speeches delivered in the House of Commons can be called inspiring. In fact, when not personal, they are prosaic. This can hardly be helped, for a Canadian Parliament, like Congress in the United States, deals, as a rule, with matters from which only genuis could draw inspiration."

Baedeker was kinder to Ottawa than essayist Goldwin Smith, who described it as "a sub-arctic lumber village converted by royal mandate into a political cockpit."

New ECC Head an Independent

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Andre Raynauld, newly-named chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, says he will always listen to the advice of government officials, but will stoutly defend the council's integrity as an independent adviser to the government on long-range economic planning.

In his 16th-floor ofice in adjoining Vanier City, looking across the Rideau River to the capital, the 43-year-old former professor of economics at the University of Montreal talked about his plans for the council as it nears its 10th birthday.

Soft-spoken but with a firm grasp of the task ahead, Dr. Raynauld said he wants to make the council's work more useful to both government and the business community.

"We'll be glad to hear what the government's problems are, but we will never ask the government what it thinks of a recommendation we intend to put forward. We will not ask its permission to undertake a study, and we will be able to say no to it.

A widely-respected expert on problems of overcoming regional economic disparities in Canada, Dr. Raynauld intends to introduce the teamwork and "think tank" approach to the council's work, and to employ other new techniques in economic analysis and forecasting.

WANTS IMPROVEMENT

The council undertakes economic research and prepares reports for a 25-member advisory board drawn from labor, management, agriculture, consumer groups, the academic world and other segments of the population. Its major recommendations bear the stamp of the council as a whole, but it also puts out individual research papers.

Dr. Raynauld hopes the council's future reports will be more diversified, more precise, more understandable to the layman, and more provocative for professional economists in business and government.

With the help of several government departments, the council has developed a new tool for forecasting the economic outlook.

The new computer formula — called Candide—involves 1,600 inter-related mathematical questions. When the button is pushed, they result in a complete picture of what might happen in the economy from now to the 1980s.

Candide draws its name from "Canadian Disaggregated Inter-Departmental Econometric" model. It is also the name of a famous book by Voltaire in which the hero is repeatedly assured, in the face of recurring disasters, that things are getting better.

The council has a staff of 105, of which 40 are professionals, mostly economists. Dr. Raynauld said he hopes to have them collaborate in groups on specific research problems. Previously, staff members were inclined to work as individuals.

Taking office last month, he has also signed three contracts with university economists to move to Ottawa for period of 15 months — a full academic year plus two vacation periods —and work in the council offices.

With Candide, the council will be able to project, on more up-to-date data, how demand for goods and services will grow. It will survey potential markets and price trends.

EXPECT TWO FORMS

Candide will be used in the council's projection of economic needs for the decade to the early 1980s, to be issued this fall. The report probably will be issued in two forms—a concise, easily-read one for the layman, and a more detailed, professional research paper for trained economists in government and business.

Dr. Raynauld succeeded Arthur J. R. Smith as chairman of the council when Dr. Smith left to become chairman of the privately-financed Conference Board in Canada. The new chairman gives his predecessor full marks for starting development of Candide about two years ago, but says he has directed the council to double its investment in the computer model of the economy.

"Consulting with government officials was anathema around here because people thought it would interfere with the independence of the council," Dr. Raynauld said.

"They won't tell me what to do. But why shouldn't we take some information from them?"

It was after the council's work was criticized last year by S. S. Reisman, deputy minister of finance, that Dr. Smith resigned. Mr. Reisman said the council had become repetitive, with nothing new to say.

Road Deaths Total 638

VANCOUVER (CP) — A total of 638 persons died in motor vehicle accidents in British Columbia during 1971, 88 fewer than in 1970, the B.C. Safety Council reported Friday.

The next highest figure was for deaths in falls — 252 compared with 204 in 1970, a council survey showed.

There were 217 unclassified accidental deaths (compared with 150 in 1970), 211 poisonings (240) and 206 drownings (220).

Accidents involving vehicles other than cars accounted for 98 accidental deaths compared with 74 the previous year. Fires and explosions took 58 lives (83), accidents involving firearms killed 16 persons (16) and liquid and steam radiation accounted for five deaths (3).

The total number of accidental deaths in the province in 1971 was 1,701, compared with 1,540 the previous year.

FACTS
ON CHARTERS
IF YOU THINK YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE A CHEAP HOLIDAY BY GOING ON ANY OLD CHARTER THAT COSTS LESS, YOU'RE KIDDING YOURSELF.
FACT—A lot of unethical charter promoters don't guarantee return flights, and won't guarantee space because they double book. Ask a group that was left stranded.
FACT—Some charters never get off the ground, except perhaps for the promoters who take off with your money. Most reliable Canadian organizers use reputable CANADIAN CARRIERS. Think about it.
FACT—Because of the high standard of Canadian regulations, some promoters advertise carriers not even permitted to land in or take off from Canada. Ask someone who got stranded even before take-off.
FACT—Your best safeguard is to book with a reputable bonded travel agency. Only a fully accredited agent can offer a complete travel service.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is there some easy way to get a pill down a dog? I never seem to be able to simply pop it down the throat as my dog's doctor does it.—L.S.

DEAR L.S.: Perhaps pill pushing is easier if you don't have to. That is, if you are able to sneak it down. Unfortunately, the pooch who needs his pill most may not be eating — and so slipping it into the food wouldn't work. Most of those who are eating can best be pilled in the following manner: (a) Coat the tablet thoroughly with oil, preferably bacon grease or butter, to mask the medication's odor. (b) Carefully insert this in the middle of a very small bite of something considered a delicacy by your dog. (c) With the dog sufficiently aroused by the food, toss the pill to him and hopefully watch him gulp it down — medication and all.

If the loaded food ball is too large the dog will begin to chew on it instead of gulping it and if he bites into the medication a time or two he's likely to explore each bite of food offered him and spit out the medication. Some dainty eaters or naturally suspicious dogs will do this anyway.

DEAR DR. MILLER: This puppy of ours has such a terrible looking skin we almost had to have him put to sleep. It was caused by — of all things — some worms. I never heard of worms getting in the skin before. Pepper is mostly coonhound and I wonder if they have more trouble with this than most dogs?—D.W.

DEAR D.W.: Yes, if only from the standpoint that perhaps the majority of hound dogs come from the South, areas most likely to be infested with hookworms. When the larva of these worms do migrate to the skin, intense irritation, and frequently infection, results. Less commonly, heartworm larva and, quite rarely, migrating larva of other worms may also be involved. Generally, however, internal parasites are apt to be a complicating factor in skin disease rather than a primary cause.

Nostalgia Wave Still Dominates Shows

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — While Broadway kicks up its heels to the Charleston tunes of No, No, Nanette, London audiences are wallowing in the Deep South romance of Jerome Kern's Show Boat, now in the sixth month of a smash-hit revival and selling tickets into 1973.

Nostalgia for more secure and innocent times continues to sweep both sides of the Atlantic, spanning a time range from the summery Edwardian elegance of the movie The Go-Between to the blue jeans and rock 'n' roll of 1950s adolescence.

Nanette, which stars old trouper Ruby Keeler on Broadway and may come to London with veteran singer Alice Faye, dates from 1925 and Show Boat first was performed in 1927. Going even farther back, a London impresario recently dusted off the 1890s stage comedy Charley's Aunt and it's back in the West End with Tom Courtenay playing the lead.

Almost everywhere you look here, someone is digging up the past. Her Majesty's Stationery Office is selling First World War recruiting posters. The Victoria and Albert Museum has started a new collecting craze with a full-scale exhibition of pre-war decorated cookie containers, of all things.

Vera Lynn, Second World War "Forces' Sweetheart", is back with her own show on BBC television and at 54, says she is "singing better than 25 years ago."

REVIVES MILLER HITS

A British bandleader named Syd Lawrence has made a big hit by exactly copying, note for note, the sweetly swinging band and vocal arrangements of the late Glenn Miller. Not only that, he fills the gigantic Royal Albert Hall with his concerts of Miller Classics and the BBC recently devoted a whole program on its cultural schedule to analysing the phenomenon.

One of TV's longest-running programs here is All Our Yesterdays, which reruns newsreel film of exactly 25 years ago each week, linked with the dry commentary of anchorman Brian Inglis. In about 10 years' time, assuming it is still running, All Our Yesterdays will have caught up with its own beginnings.

The Second World War is surefire box-office on the box. A faithful following tunes in every week to commercial TV's A Family At War, a saga of Liverpool folk struggling through the blitz years, BBC's Dad's Army, a humorous series about the wartime Home Guard—now also a movie—is vastly popular.

Fashion writers and designers here have been spellbound by the 1940s—square shoulders, platform shoes and all. They have also dabbled in the 1950s look and now are confidently predicting a further revival of 1920s fashions to coincide with the British opening of Ken Russell's movie version of The Boy Friend, starring Cockney model Twiggy in her first song-and-dance role.

EMPIRE STORY RETOLD

After Show Boat, which gave French-Canadian singer Andre Jobin a successful West End debut as Mississippi gambler Gaylord Ravenal, impresario Harold Fielding plans to import more Southern charm by the bucketful in a musical version of Gone With the Wind, due to open in May.

On TV, more nostalgia was provided with the opening in January of a 13-part series on the history of the British Empire. Canadian Max Morgan-Witts, the editor in charge of the project, says it will "inevitably cause controversy" — either with the generation that remembers the empire fondly, or with the one that disowns it.

Morgan-Witts, who was born in Detroit but raised in Calgary and got his broadcasting start in Calgary and Toronto, has been working on the series for 2½ years in conjunction with Time-Life Books. The fourth episode is devoted to the beginnings of Canada.

"The past is a foreign country, they do things differently there," says the narrator in the opening sentence of L. P. Hartley's novel The Go-Between.

PROVIDES REST CURE

This may explain why some of today's teen-age girls make up to look like Jean Harlow or Clara Bow, or tease their hair into a curly 1940s style. For them, as one London journalist wrote recently, nostalgia is a voyage of discovery, not a return to old securities.

Daily Mail writer Ferdinand Mount suggested nostalgia "hangs about us like a fog" at times when nations are playing a passive rather than active role.

There wasn't time for thinking about the past, he says, when North American pioneers were opening up the West, when Russians were building in the "false dawn" of their revolution, or when Israelis were making the desert blossom.

"But for us in the West now, the future is bewildering, numbing in its threat of unremitting and unpredictable change ..... nostalgia offers us a rest cure."

The nice thing about it, he suggests, is that you can pick and choose from the past—Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers rather than Hiter, Mussolini and the dole queues.

WEDDING BELLS BANNED

SOUTHAM, England (UPI) — The Rev. Ronald Murray has banned wedding bells and organ music for brides who are not regular churchgoers.

"It doesn't seem fair that non-worshippers should be able to enjoy the same privileges and extra benefits as people who work hard for the church," he said.

President's Suspension Overturned

MONTREAL (CP) — Court of Appeal formally suspended Thursday a Superior Court order which last month barred Leonard (Red) McLaughlin from fulfilling his functions as president-elect-of-the Seafarers' International Union.

Justices Edouard Rinfret and Roger Brossard upheld a motion on behalf of Mr. McLaughlin requesting the order be suspended pending an appeal hearing.

Mr. McLaughlin, the union and its secretary John Royce, are appealing a Superior Court authorization of the preliminary issuance of a mandamus writ which questions the validity of the presidential election held last December.

Airport Bomb Defused In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—Explosive experts defused a live bomb found in a parcel locker at Vancouver International Airport Friday night after CP Air received a call demanding $200,000.

The threat forced two Vancouver-Montreal CP Air flights to be delayed for searches in Toronto and a third flight from Vancouver to Tokyo was diverted to Anchorage.

The drama began when a man phoned CP Air and demanded $200,000. He said bombs had been planted in certain places and threatened to detonate them if the money was not paid.

The bomb, defused by RCMP explosives experts, was reported to have weighed 30 pounds.

IN AIR

CP Air had two flights en route to Montreal and a flight to Tokyo in the air when the threat was made.

A spokesman for the airline declined to give details, but said: "From the information we received from the caller, we decided to stop and search the flights."

About 200 passengers on the Canadian flights were delayed for almost three hours while the planes and baggage were searched.

The other flight was 400 miles north of Amchitka Island in the Bering Sea on the trans-polar route to Japan when the bomb call was received.

UNDER ESCORT

It remained overnight after it was searched in order to comply with rest times required for jet crews. It was to leave at 12 noon PST today.

Poor Get Little —Opposition

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

Provincial opposition leaders said Friday Premier Bennett's $1.45 billion budget does little for the poor, the elderly and tenants.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said it was a conservative budget which will prove a "major disappointment to the average working person or retired person in British Columbia."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer termed it a "cynical budget" leading to increased taxes for elderly people in low income groups.

NURSING HOMES

Progressive Conservative House Leader Scott Wallace said he could not believe Premier Bennett would increase spending by more than $266 million and devote "not one penny" for care of the elderly sick in nursing homes and private hospitals.

Barrett also predicted municipal tax increases because of the budget's failure to increase the per-capita grant to municipalities. He said the increases in the homeowner grant will "at best" keep pace with inflationary tax increases in previous years.

He said he intends to study this weekend whether the increase borrowing authority for B.C. Hydro by $500 million was done to account for an "over-cost" in Columbia River Treaty funds.

"It's certainly not a little people's budget. In effect you can say it's a gimmickry budget with more of the same. No real direction at all."

He refused to say whether he thought this was a pre-election budget. Barrett also criticized the budget's failure to speak of increased revenues from the resource industries, particularly mining.

BACK TO WORK

Because the budget did not allow for an increase in welfare rates, he said, chronic welfare recipients will have less hope than before of being able to get back to work. He also hit the lack of money to subsidize the working poor.

McGeer said the budget's only redeeming feature was the $50 homeowner grant increase to the elderly. But this must be put into perspective, he said.

IRA Slips Blockade, Sunday Attack Feared

NEWRY, Northern Ireland (CP) — Security forces say guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army are slipping into the blockaded town of Newry to attack British troops sent there to disperse a planned civil rights march by Roman Catholics Sunday.

Roads to Newry, near the border with the Irish Republic, have been blocked by soldiers who are searching vehicles for hidden arms. British intelligence officers say they were tipped by a woman that the IRA gave her sons British army uniforms to wear at the parade.

DEMONSTRATION

The planned parade Sunday by thousands of civil rights marchers has been declared illegal under Northern Ireland's ban on public processions. IRA leaders claim they have advised their members to avoid Newry over the week to prevent another "bloody Sunday."

Foreign Minister Patrick Hillery is flying to Ottawa from Washington this weekend for talks with Canadian leaders Monday. He received no pledge of assistance from the U.S.

Newry was poised to receive hundreds of journalists from around the world who were pouring in to report on the march which is expected to be joined by about 30,000 people from Ulster and the republic.

The one hint of a possible compromise was suggestions that the march organizers might decide to hold a public meeting—still legal in Ulster — instead of a demonstration.

British Prime Minister Edward Heath, Home Secretary Reginald Maudling and Ulster Premier Brian Faulkner have urged that the march be called off. Heath and Faulkner met for six hours in London Friday but no new policies were announced.

CARDINAL SPEAKS

Cardinal Conway, Roman Catholic primate of all Ireland, added his voice to those calling for cancellation of the demonstration.

The town was ringed Friday night with British troops and members of the volunteer Ulster Defence Regiment who searched all vehicles entering the area for explosives or weapons.

The red lights of army vehicles flashed in the heavy mist as soldiers with blackened faces, many carrying automatic weapons carried out their minute searches.

Inside the town of 18,000, predominantly Catholic, most stores have been boarded up as a precaution against further violence or as a result of attacks launched against them in recent months.

BIG PARADE

The Sunday demonstration is everyone's preoccupation. A working class club, usually packed with late-night drinkers was nearly empty by midnight Friday. Most had gone home early to brace themselves for the expected crisis ahead.

An additional 500 British troops have been sent to Ulster, bringing the total to 15,000. Heath says he is determined to carry out what he considers to be his responsibility to uphold the ban on marches.

One soldier was flown to hospital in Belfast late Friday with serious wounds suffered when a bomb exploded near the border. An elderly man was seriously wounded in another blast in the capital.

EAST TORY COOL TO QUEEN OATH

HALIFAX (CP) — Patrick Nowlan, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Annapolis Valley, caused a stir at the provincial party's annual meeting Friday when he said he "wouldn't fight too hard" if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to one emphasizing Canada.

The monarchy was looked upon as a "divisive influence in Quebec," Mr. Nowlan said, adding that he "wouldn't fight too hard if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to an oath of allegiance to Canada."

His comments came after leader Robert Stanfield confirmed his support for the monarchy in response to a questioner who suggested the opposition leader's stand on the matter was as "wishy-washy" as Prime Minister Trudeau's.

'Housecleaning' Faces 20 Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says a "housecleaning" of Liberal members of Parliament from Quebec is planned by the party in advance of the next general election, involving the retirement, sometimes forced, of about one third of the party's Quebec MPs.

The newspaper says in an Ottawa story that about 20 members are believed to be involved, some of whom will retire by choice and "some will be forced out." Some will be coaxed into comfortable jobs "arranged by the government," the report says.

There are 56 Liberals among the 74 Quebec MPs and, the report says, a "new team" is wanted by top party officials.

The Star says Liberal sources in Ottawa are reluctant to confirm details but the campaign has been in progress quietly for about two years.

The target is the "large group of old guard Quebec MPs, who occupy, eternally safe Liberal seats but add little or nothing to the Quebec presence in Ottawa."

The report says the work of rejuvenation is mainly in the hands of Marc Lalonde, principal private secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, assisted by Jean Richard, Liberal party director in Quebec.

Neither Mr. Lalonde, Mr. Richard nor other Liberal spokesmen were available for comment.

Homeowners Bag Lion's Share

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

An exhuberant Premier W. A. C. Bennett unloaded $116 million in accumulated surpluses on top of a record $1.45 billion budget Friday and indicated there's plenty more where that came from.

Bennett offered increases in homeowner grants and dumped $90 million into special funds, some of them for job-creation programs.

The $1.45 billion balanced budget for the year beginning April 1 would represent a 12 per cent increase over estimated spending in the current fiscal year.

But the additional $116 million in surplus spending puts the total proposed expenditures at $1.568 billion — $266 million or 20 per cent more than estimated for the current year.

BIG CUSHION

Even with the additional spending of accumulated surpluses, Bennett's interim financial statements for the first nine months of the current year show him with a $50 million cushion that could hit $150 million by the end of the 1972-73 fiscal year.

Bennett, hoarse but lively, repeatedly interjected plugs for the Social Credit government into his 90-minute budget speech and wound up by calling it "the government that really cares."

The 71-year-old premier was applauded wildly by Socreds as he announced a $15 increase — to $185 — in the annual homeowner grant and an additional $50 for those over 65, making a total of $235.

The extra money would help keep older people in their homes despite rising property tax burdens, Bennett said.

Bennett declined to call it an "election budget," suggesting that all budgets are election budgets.

'Up Periscope' Near For Motorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. motorists will be peering through a periscope instead of into a rearview mirror four years from now under new government safety standards.

The new equipment gets rid of the blind spots that are a hazard with the interior and outside rearview mirrors now employed, says Charles Kaehn, director of driver visibility standards for the national highway traffic safety administration.

"This new system gives twice the horizontal field of view that you get with conventional mirrors," Kaehn said on a recent test drive in a periscope-equipped sedan.

Present rearview mirrors give a 30-degree sweep of vision. The test version of the periscope offers 60 degrees and the regular system that will be adopted for all new cars, effective probably in September 1976, will cover about 80 degrees.

Some drivers who have tried out the experimental version say the field of coverage is almost too great. So much rear action meets the eye that they find it confusing.

Most agreed that there will be no real difficulty adjusting to the new equipment.

Donnely Mirrors, Inc., Holland, Mich., produced 50 of the periscopes under a $14,000 contract and installed them on cars being test-driven by government employees.

The test mirrors ride atop the cars so that from the outside they resemble the sign cabinet of a taxicab.

The cost to the consumer, Kaehn said, will be about $25. It would be more except that manufacturers save by eliminating the inner and outer mirrors now required.

CANADA CONCESSIONS ON TRADE REPORTED

Trade "irritants" which have led to strained relations between Canada and the United States for some time may have been resolved, the Financial Times says in a dispatch from Ottawa.

Writer Bogdan Kipling reports that officials in both countries have agreed to a package deal which calls for concessions on both sides, but mainly from Canada. Story on Page 2.

Dam for Floods 'Stupid'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

An internationally-known environmentalist said today building the proposed Moran dam on the Fraser for flood control is a concept "stupid beyond measure."

Roderick Haig-Brown of Campbell River said a dyking system to protect the lower Fraser Valley will be needed with or without the dam and will do the job by itself.

He was asked to comment on remarks in the legislature this week by Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan who said in his view, if the Moran dam does go ahead, it should only be built for flood control reasons.

The proposed 700-foot dam would flood about 170 miles of river valley north from near Merritt to near Quesnel. An idea which has lain dormant for several years, it is now under study by the B.C. Energy Board which is charting provincial power needs until 1985.

Kiernan said with or without the Moran dam, major flooding of interior river valleys will be needed for flood control on the lower Fraser.

"I don't think he could be much further out," Haig-Brown said today. "Of all the clumsy ways to get flood control, a very costly mainstream dam on a big river is the least efficient."

Ideal flood control if dams are involved at all would be through headwater dams on sidestreams together with proper protection of headwater timber.

"This sort of thing we're not doing on the Fraser to any great extent and of course far too much building on the floodplains has been permitted and encouraged. The land has too great an agricultural value," he said.

Kiernan said cost estimates of dyking along the Fraser have blossomed from $4 million in 1963 to the neighborhood of $80 million.

Haig-Brown said he understood an estimate in 1969 put the cost at about $18 million and the reference to $80 million must be to some other scheme he knows nothing about.

Estimates on the cost of the Moran dam have ranged to half a billion dollars. There is still a question of whether the proposed site is practical from a construction standpoint.

Ecologists, including Haig-Brown, have condemned the idea of the Moran dam because of environmental damage they say would follow, including destruction of huge salmon runs.

The town was ringed Friday night with British troops and members of the volunteer Ulster Defence Regiment who searched all vehicles entering the area for explosives or weapons.

The red lights of army vehicles flashed in the heavy mist as soldiers with blackened faces, many carrying automatic weapons carried out their minute searches.

Inside the town of 18,000, predominantly Catholic, most stores have been boarded up as a precaution against further violence or as a result of attacks launched against them in recent months.

BIG PARADE

The Sunday demonstration is everyone's preoccupation. A working class club, usually packed with late-night drinkers was nearly empty by midnight Friday. Most had gone home early to brace themselves for the expected crisis ahead.

An additional 500 British troops have been sent to Ulster, bringing the total to 15,000. Heath says he is determined to carry out what he considers to be his responsibility to uphold the ban on marches.

One soldier was flown to hospital in Belfast late Friday with serious wounds suffered when a bomb exploded near the border. An elderly man was seriously wounded in another blast in the capital.

EAST TORY COOL TO QUEEN OATH

HALIFAX (CP) — Patrick Nowlan, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Annapolis Valley, caused a stir at the provincial party's annual meeting Friday when he said he "wouldn't fight too hard" if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to one emphasizing Canada.

The monarchy was looked upon as a "divisive influence in Quebec," Mr. Nowlan said, adding that he "wouldn't fight too hard if the oath of allegiance to the Queen were changed to an oath of allegiance to Canada."

His comments came after leader Robert Stanfield confirmed his support for the monarchy in response to a questioner who suggested the opposition leader's stand on the matter was as "wishy-washy" as Prime Minister Trudeau's.

'Housecleaning' Faces 20 Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — The Star says a "housecleaning" of Liberal members of Parliament from Quebec is planned by the party in advance of the next general election, involving the retirement, sometimes forced, of about one third of the party's Quebec MPs.

The newspaper says in an Ottawa story that about 20 members are believed to be involved, some of whom will retire by choice and "some will be forced out." Some will be coaxed into comfortable jobs "arranged by the government," the report says.

There are 56 Liberals among the 74 Quebec MPs and, the report says, a "new team" is wanted by top party officials.

The Star says Liberal sources in Ottawa are reluctant to confirm details but the campaign has been in progress quietly for about two years.

The target is the "large group of old guard Quebec MPs, who occupy, eternally safe Liberal seats but add little or nothing to the Quebec presence in Ottawa."

The report says the work of rejuvenation is mainly in the hands of Marc Lalonde, principal private secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, assisted by Jean Richard, Liberal party director in Quebec.

Neither Mr. Lalonde, Mr. Richard nor other Liberal spokesmen were available for comment.

Homeowners Bag Lion's Share

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

An exhuberant Premier W. A. C. Bennett unloaded $116 million in accumulated surpluses on top of a record $1.45 billion budget Friday and indicated there's plenty more where that came from.

Bennett offered increases in homeowner grants and dumped $90 million into special funds, some of them for job-creation programs.

The $1.45 billion balanced budget for the year beginning April 1 would represent a 12 per cent increase over estimated spending in the current fiscal year.

But the additional $116 million in surplus spending puts the total proposed expenditures at $1.568 billion — $266 million or 20 per cent more than estimated for the current year.

BIG CUSHION

Even with the additional spending of accumulated surpluses, Bennett's interim financial statements for the first nine months of the current year show him with a $50 million cushion that could hit $150 million by the end of the 1972-73 fiscal year.

Bennett, hoarse but lively, repeatedly interjected plugs for the Social Credit government into his 90-minute budget speech and wound up by calling it "the government that really cares."

The 71-year-old premier was applauded wildly by Socreds as he announced a $15 increase — to $185 — in the annual homeowner grant and an additional $50 for those over 65, making a total of $235.

The extra money would help keep older people in their homes despite rising property tax burdens, Bennett said.

Bennett declined to call it an "election budget," suggesting that all budgets are election budgets.

'Up Periscope' Near For Motorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. motorists will be peering through a periscope instead of into a rearview mirror four years from now under new government safety standards.

The new equipment gets rid of the blind spots that are a hazard with the interior and outside rearview mirrors now employed, says Charles Kaehn, director of driver visibility standards for the national highway traffic safety administration.

"This new system gives twice the horizontal field of view that you get with conventional mirrors," Kaehn said on a recent test drive in a periscope-equipped sedan.

Present rearview mirrors give a 30-degree sweep of vision. The test version of the periscope offers 60 degrees and the regular system that will be adopted for all new cars, effective probably in September 1976, will cover about 80 degrees.

Some drivers who have tried out the experimental version say the field of coverage is almost too great. So much rear action meets the eye that they find it confusing.

Most agreed that there will be no real difficulty adjusting to the new equipment.

Donnely Mirrors, Inc., Holland, Mich., produced 50 of the periscopes under a $14,000 contract and installed them on cars being test-driven by government employees.

The test mirrors ride atop the cars so that from the outside they resemble the sign cabinet of a taxicab.

The cost to the consumer, Kaehn said, will be about $25. It would be more except that manufacturers save by eliminating the inner and outer mirrors now required.

Dam for Floods 'Stupid'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

An internationally-known environmentalist said today building the proposed Moran dam on the Fraser for flood control is a concept "stupid beyond measure."

Roderick Haig-Brown of Campbell River said a dyking system to protect the lower Fraser Valley will be needed with or without the dam and will do the job by itself.

He was asked to comment on remarks in the legislature this week by Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan who said in his view, if the Moran dam does go ahead, it should only be built for flood control reasons.

The proposed 700-foot dam would flood about 170 miles of river valley north from near Merritt to near Quesnel. An idea which has lain dormant for several years, it is now under study by the B.C. Energy Board which is charting provincial power needs until 1985.

Kiernan said with or without the Moran dam, major flooding of interior river valleys will be needed for flood control on the lower Fraser.

"I don't think he could be much further out," Haig-Brown said today. "Of all the clumsy ways to get flood control, a very costly mainstream dam on a big river is the least efficient."

Ideal flood control if dams are involved at all would be through headwater dams on sidestreams togetner with proper protection of headwater timber.

"This sort of thing we're not doing on the Fraser to any great extent and of course far too much building on the floodplains has been permitted and encouraged. The land has too great an agricultural value," he said.

Kiernan said cost estimates of dyking along the Fraser have blossomed from $4 million in 1963 to the neighborhood of $80 million.

Haig-Brown said he understood an estimate in 1969 put the cost at about $18 million and the reference to $80 million must be to some other scheme he knows nothing about.

Estimates on the cost of the Moran dam have ranged to half a billion dollars. There is still a question of whether the proposed site is practical from a construction standpoint.

Ecologists, including Haig-Brown, have condemned the idea of the Moran dam because of environmental damage they say would follow, including destruction of huge salmon runs.

Local Cetacean Credits Homo Sapiens With Rudimentary Thought Capability

Guess who is coming to dinner? Haida acts as host to McKinnon.

By WALTER McKINNON
Times Staff

"Human behaviour is one of the most fascinating and varied sciences a whale can pursue," a prominent city cetacean believes.

"The more I discover about the human animal, the more I realize remains to be discovered."

The convivial cetacean, a killer whale named Haida who is at present preparing a thesis titled Homo Sapiens and Its Relationship to The Environment for his docterate in human behavioral science, is perhaps in a better position than any other whale in the world to make such sweeping statements.

He has since 1969 been Whale in Residence at Oak Bay Marina's Sealand of the Pacific, and he is one of a small but dedicated group of cetaceans credited with beginning to build a bridge of communication over the awesome chasm between whales and humans.

★

Over lunch recently in his quarters, Haida described a few of the experiments he has been conducting with humans and the conclusions to which he has been led.

"For example," he says, "I believe — and I think my experiments have borne out the suspicion — that human beings are to a degree capable of reasoning thought. They have a very large brain for a primate, you know, and the cortex is well-developed."

A continuing series of "conditioned response" experiments, he says, definitely indicates a rudimentary thought process in humans.

"Over the past three years I have succeeded in training a group of humans to feed me herring on signal," he says. "And I have to reject the suggestion that this is simply an induced response because believe me, you can almost SEE these people thinking. It's quite amazing, really."

Orca gladiator's station in life has improved immeasurably in the past eight years.

As recently as 1964, federal officials were considering machine-gunning him out of existence. The artillery had already been installed on the rocks at Johnstone Straits.

Today he is protected by law in Canadian waters and there is a growing school of thought which credits him with intelligence equal or superior to human beings.

How does the killer whale himself feel about this dramatic change of attitude? The Times tried to find out and this interview is the result.

"Some of the people I've been working with on a long-term basis," he says, "are developing distinct personalities. Bob Wright, for example, almost thinks like a whale."

Haida is definitely impressed with the learning abilities and desire to co-operate exhibited by most people. But he's quick to point out the pitfalls inherent in demanding too much from them.

"After all, they really are only human," he says.

"We must avoid beginning to think of them in cetacean terms, because at this stage they have only just begun their evolutionary journey."

★

Homo sapiens, he says, can be generally classified as a "primitive-aggressive," indicating just how low on the scale of evolution it really is.

"For example, it is the only member of the primate branch which regularly and wantonly slaughters its own."

Haida was asked if he regrets the sacrifices he has been forced to make in pursuit of his studies. Does he find living in a restricted environment at Sealand, for example, psychologically damaging?

"Not really." He thought about it briefly. "Any discipline demands sacrifices." And glancing around his quarters he flashed a toothy smile. "I get my three square meals a day, I have company, and there are no threats to my welfare . . . I'm quite well off, actually."

"You get attached to them," he says of his people. "They're very playful and easy to please. Wright, as an example . . . he loves to play hide-and-seek with us . . . loves it. And nothing makes our humans happier than when one of us squirts icy water on them."

According to Haida, humans have developed a very structured, restrictive social framework. "We refer to it as their pecking order," he says.

There are dominant humans and recessive humans, he says, and a very short observation period is sufficient for a whale to determine which is which.

What are his plans for the future?

"Well, of course I have years of work ahead of me right here at Sealand," he says. "I'm planning to raise a family . . . and frankly, I believe the study of human beings could keep me occupied for a lifetime."

Let's Take a Look: Curtis

By
CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Municipal leaders should "at least sit down and see what's been offered" in Premier Bennett's rapid transit system proposal, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich said today.

The mayor, chairman of the Captail Regional Board, said he's "not jumping up and down" about the formula outlined in Friday's budget speech, but felt it should be studied "after the dust settles."

However, Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria was strongly critical.

"No one in his right mind would take over a losing proposition like B.C. Hydro's transit system if only half the deficit is picked up by the province."

Bennett's offer appears to encourage municipalities in the Victoria and Vancouver regions to join forces and buy the B.C. Hydro bus systems operating in those areas.

FAIR PRICE

Bennett said in his speech "I'm sure that if the cities wanted to buy the system, Hydro would make them a very fair offer."

He said the offer applied to any municipality in British Columbia, but the capital and Vancouver are considered the only urban areas pressed for answers to rapid transit problems.

The offer by Bennett is for the province to pay half the operating deficit, not including depreciation, but including any amortized debt charges, of construction and operation of municipally owned transit systems.

The preamble of the bill introducing the offer says it is aimed at decreasing the expense of providing costly roads and parking places for increasing numbers of private automobiles. The development of transit systems would also help in "preventing and eliminating traffic congestion in the municipality and the resultant air pollution," the preamble says.

One of the conditions of such grants, the bill says, is that municipalities should "give preference in the control of traffic" on city streets to transit vehicles.

Bennett would maintain the right to approve terms of debt financing and capital expenditures on a transit system.

Curtis said the offer was "at least a recognition" of the transit problem facing the metropolitan urban areas. He wanted Victoria municipalities to sit down and talk about it, probably in the context of the regional district, and see what there was in the offer.

Curtis admitted that "it may very well be rejected."

NO NEW FUNDS

He also said large amounts would have to be spent to bring the B.C. Hydro buses up to standard in Victoria.

Greater Vancouver Regional district chairman Ron Andrews rejected the offer, saying "there is no way from where I sit that we would take over Hydro buses and pay half their deficit."

"Mr. Bennett I know and Dr. Shrum (B.C. Hydro chairman) I know have always wanted to get rid of this loser, but they are not going to get rid of it at the expense of the homeowner, the same homeowner who gives them the profit on the other side through the utility bills," Andrews said.

OBLIGATION

Shrum commented that Hydro has an obligation to its bondholders to get the best price possible in any sale of the bus system.

However, at his press conference following the speech, Bennett said he would take responsibility for deciding "fair" return in a sale.

"It is the fiscal agent who is responsible to the bondholders, mainly because he is responsible for Hydro's borrowing, and he would probably recommend that Hydro offer a fair deal because the system is costing Hydro money."

Bennett is fiscal agent for B.C. Hydro.

'Mr. Towboat' Back at Helm

Harold Elworthy, "Mr. Towboat" of the Pacific, is back in business again after a short retirement.

Elworthy resigned as honorary chairman with Seaspan (a combination of his former company, Island Tug and Barge and Vancouver Tug) last August.

He has recently formed the Elworthy Towing Co. Ltd., operating out of the marine building in Vancouver with his former traffic manager, Alex Welsh, as general manager.

But Elworthy scotched waterfront scuttlebut that he had already bought two tugs. He said he intended to get back into the towing business "very, very gently," hinting that important developments would be seen in six months.

"I am going to be very selective," he said, "I still have a few barges and will be having a building program tailored to the situation.

"You can say that we'll be in the log-barge business — we were one of the originators of the self-unloading barge."

Elworthy has spent more than half a century in the towing business, beginning as an office boy with the B.C. Salvage Company in 1918.

He began building his seaborne empire in 1925 when he formed Island Tug and Barge. The following year he bought out Gardner Towing from Capt. W. E. Gardner, subsequently forming the Straits Towing Company.

Elworthy left the management of Island Tug and Barge in 1941. He "re-acquired" it in 1943. He later bought Preston Marine Towing Company, then, Young and Gore.

Why is he getting back into harness at an age when most men are content to relax and, maybe, go fishing?

Elworthy says, "You can't sit back and go to sleep—it's ridiculous.

"There are so many opportunities and I want to be part of the fun."

He says he intends to make his operations province-wide.

Coast-Watcher Corps Urged to Aid Rescues

A Sidney marina operator has proposed a network of local "coast watchers" equipped with bearing indicators to save precious moments during sea rescue operations.

Stephen Dickinson of Van Isle Marina, a former member of the Royal National Lifeboat Institute in England, says distress calls to his office are complicated by lack of specific direction.

Waterfront residents will phone to say a boat is in trouble. But by the time the watcher's location and that of the boat has been determined much valuable time is lost.

He advocates organization of coast watcher volunteers with equipment to measure bearings over the sea within their view.

At a meeting with Dickinson Friday, provincial civil defence administrator John Erb said marine rescue could benefit from more organized volunteer help.

Prime responsibility for rescue in marine accidents lies with the Canadian Coast Guard, administered by the Department of Transport with headquarters in Vancouver.

The Rescue Co-ordination Centre in Victoria is mainly concerned with organization of air searches and co-ordination of volunteer marine rescue facilities.

"A volunteer network needs continual updating and enthusiasm to be effective," said Bissell.

The RCC has no resources itself to directly deal with marine disasters. Bissell believes self-help is the only answer for local problems.

Erb will discuss plans with the coast guard and hopes Dickinson's idea can be linked with card-carrying civil defence volunteers. Recompense for rescuers is also under discussion.

In November of 1970 a Sunday morning sailboat race turned into a nightmare when sudden squalls capsized several boats, driving at least two onto rocky shores.

WOUNDING CHARGE LAID

Charged with wounding with intend, Arnold O. Goudie, 20, of 1938 Trans Canada Highway, was remanded in provincial court today until next Wednesday for plea.

He appeared before Judge William Ostler. Bail was fixed at $500.

Hospital authorities said Higgins is in good condition. Police said the incident occurred on the Red Lion Motor Inn parking lot, 3306 Douglas Street.

Soon at the Fox, a Taste of Hellfire

THESE LAST FEW years, the Fox Theatre has earned a reputation for screening motion pictures that stick in the memory longer than most. So when Barney Simmons tells me he has bagged an outstanding film for his Quadra Street quonset, my ears perk up.

Barney passed the word this week that "The Devils," a Robert H. Solo-Ken Russell production which has provoked American critics into a rash of exclamation-points, was ready for previewing.

"It's a rough one," he added — a remark that deserves to be rated among the under-statements of the year.

I relayed this warning to my booted mouse as we crunched along a wintry block to the Fox. There we joined others come to view brilliant producer-writer Russell's recycling of man's inhumanity to man and woman as visited on the walled French city of Loudon in 1634.

For his source material, Russell leaned on Aldous Huxley's "The Devils of Loudon," and the stage play made from that book by John Whiting.

The result is an outstanding film, right enough. I'll be surprised if it doesn't win an Oscar nomination for Vanessa Redgrave, cast as an unmotherly Mother Superior, and maybe the same for Oliver Reed as a priest whose vow of celibacy isn't proof against the lusts of the flesh.

It is also the stuff of nightmare, replete with gory torturings and topped off with a burning at the stake so realistic that you can almost hear the victim sizzle.

As two of a twentieth-century audience conditioned to screen violence, my wife and I sat through those scenes without a quiver. But there are times when we wish the film diet weren't so damnably one-sided.

Must all be violence? The intervals between such good and gentle films as "Love Story" or "A Ring of Bright Water" stretches too wide. Those were also memorable pictures: I think that others beside us would welcome more of their kind and quality.

To resume:

The showing over, the company did repair to The Medieval Inn, which hangeth its sign at 1005 Broad Street. There worthye host Michael Rose bade all make merry, which we did with food, wine and right good minstrelsy. Prawns there were, and a flame-red sauce to lave their tender substance, withall, and dyverse other dainties in good store . . .

Those hearty days of old had their bright side, no doubt about it! But anyone who would trade the world of today with all its troubles for them had best go see "The Devils." I can't think of a more effective antidote to romantic yearnings for times past.

There are few sights more dismal to a driver, especially if he has no one to blame except himself, than a car with a dead battery. One way to bring this sorry state of affairs about is to leave your headlights on for a few hours. At least once a year — usually in the half-dark of an early morning — I forget to punch my mount's light switch.

The second-last time this happened cost me a hike along a back-road to the nearest telephone, and a wait for a garage serviee truck.

"What you ought to do," the garageman advised when my beast was purring again, "is get a set of booster cables. Then anyone who happens along can hook you up to his battery and give you enough of a charge to get started."

Sound advice, as I've proved since. That pair of clip-ish cables earned their keep next time I forgot to douse my car lights. Another driver who hadn't let his eagerness to start a day's fishing turn him absent-minded supplied a saving shot of juice.

It'll happen again, I'm sure. Meanwhile, by way of passing on a favor, I've supplied battery first-aid to a couple of other forgetful fellows who had landed themselves in the same nuisancy jackpot.

Like spare tires, car flashlight and other hardluck gear, this item of emergency equipment is one that I hope not to need. Still, when an occasion does arise, it's well worth trunk-space.
